JESSE JONES BRANDS WALLACE CHARGE 'UNTRUE, DASTARDLY'

Anxiety for Future Stirs Willkie Early During World Trip

"One World," by Wendell L. Willkie, is breaking all sales records as a book and more copies have already been sold than any book in history over a similar period of time The Constitution is proud to present to its readers this version of "One World," carefully condensed into 10 installments from the original book of 60,000 words, to be followed by a new and exclusive article by Willkie as the final installment.

CHAPTER ONE.

In a four-engined Consolidated bomber, converted for transport service and operated by United States Army officers, I left Mitchell Field, New York, on August 26 (1942), to see what I could of the world and the war, its battlefronts, its leaders and its people.

Exactly 49 days later, on October 14, I landed in Minneapolis, Minn.. I had encircled the world, not in the northern latitudes where the circumference is small, but on a route which crossed the equator twice.

I had traveled a total of 31,000 miles, which—looked at as a figure—still impresses and almost bewilders me. For the net impression of my trip was not one of distance from other peoples. but of closeness to them.

The extraordinary fact is that to cover this enormous distance we were in the air a total of only 160 hours.

There are no distant points in the world any longer. Our thinking in the future must be world-wide.

Upon arriving in Egypt, I accepted eagerly an invitation from General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery to see the front for myself, at El Alamein.

With Mike Cowles and Major General Russell L. Maxwell, then commander of United States forces in Egypt, we drove out of Cairo on the desert road to the front.

Almost before we were out of our cars, General Montgomery launched into a detailed description of a battle which for the first time in months had stopped Rommel dead.

At first it was hard for me to understand why the general kept repeating, in a quiet way, "Egypt has been saved." The enemy was deep in Egypt and had not retreated.

I remembered the skepticism I had found in Cairo, born of earlier British claims.

But before I left the trailer in which General Montgomery had rigged up his map room, I had learned more about desert warfare, and he had convinced me that something more than the ubiquitous self-confidence of the British officer and gentleman lay behind his assurance that the threat to Egypt had been liquidated.

The next day we toured the front and I saw with my own eyes the clusters of tank and artillery troops, the occasional fighter-plane bases, and the formidable supply units which constitute a front in the fluid, checkerboard type of warfare that goes on in the desert.

On the way back to General Montgomery's headquarters, he summed up what I had seen and heard.

"With the superiority in tanks and planes that I have established as a result of this battle and with Rommel's inability to get reinforcements of materiel across the eastern Mediterranean—for our air forces are destroying four out of every five of his materiel transports—it is now mathematically certain that I will eventually destroy Rommel. This battle was the crtical test . . ."

Two memories stand out in my mind today of Alexandria. The first was a long discussion with Rear Admiral Rene Godfroy, in command of the forlorn units of the French fleet in the harbor.

He was sorely troubled by the turn of events in France, and almost uneducated in any meaning of the war outside his simple officer's discipline.

He had obviously been deeply embittered by the naval actions of the British against French ships after June, 1940. But he expressed great friendship for the United States and a desire for our victory.

My secondary memory of Alexandria is of a dinner that night at the home of Admiral Harwood, hero of the epic fight of the Exeter against the Graf Spee in South American waters, and now commander of the British navy in the eastern Mediterranean.

He invited to dine with us 10 of his compatriots in the naval, diplomatic, or consular service in Alexandria.

I tried to draw out these men, all of them experienced

Feud Flares Anew Following 2-Hour White House Parley

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—The capital's hottest controversy flared again tonight as Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones issued a new statement accusing Vice President Wallace of making a "dastardly" and "untrue" charge against the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which is under Jones' jurisdiction.

Earlier in the night, Wallace had said he had intended no reflection on Jones' "patriotism or his interest in the war effort" by accusing the RFC of hampering work of the Board of Economic Warfare.

Jones replied that "this dastardly charge (against the RFC) is as untrue as when he first made it."

Called to White House.

Jones and Wallace, who is chairman of BEW, had been called to the White House during the day to explain their feud over imports of strategic materials and had conferred there for two hours with War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Wallace then said he had agreed with Jones that "for the time being" the BEW would continue the present arrangement under which it draws funds for its activities from the RFC, but would later press congress for direct appropriations. He added that Jones had made no objection to this decision. Jones declared sharply, however, that "Mr. Wallace was not authorized to speak for me."

Wallace said in his statement:

"I have talked with Mr. Jesse Jones. He and I have agreed for the time being to continue the present arrangement under which the Board of Economic Warfare is functioning.

"I advised Mr. Jones that in my statement to the press I had no intention to reflect upon his patriotism or his interest in the war effort. I intended to assert that the delays in RFC in acting upon projects had delayed the war effort.

"Strong Differences."

"Our difficulties have had to do with strong differences of opinion with regard to the quantities of various products to be obtained at a given time and place."

Jones countered that "Mr. Wallace in his statement tonight repeats that delays of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have retarded the war effort. This dastardly charge is as untrue as when he first made it. As for the rest of his statement Mr. Wallace was not authorized to speak for me. I will continue to speak for myself and as previously stated I shall insist upon a congressional investigation."

The feud between the two broke into the open yesterday when Wallace, as chairman of the Board of Economic Warfare, made public a 28-page complaint against alleged obstruction of his agency's program by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation which Jones supervises.

Wallace asked that congress give the BEW a free hand and its own funds with which to import strategic materials.

Robert Seeks U. S. Diplomat For Martinique

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—Admiral Georges Robert, Vichy French high commissioner of Martinique, has asked the United States government to send an envoy "to fix the terms for a change of French authority" on the Caribbean island, the Martinique radio reported tonight in a broadcast recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

The broadcast declared that Robert had taken the step "to avoid bloodshed" and had made his request to the United States "under the double condition of their renewing the guarantee to maintain French sovereignty in these islands, and of the nonintervention of American forces."

The broadcast, in the French language, presented Robert's statement as a "communique to the population."

There have been several recent reports of disorders in Martinique.

'The Heat Wave Is Over,' Says Official Forecaster

Showers for the past two days have brought Atlantans some relief from the sweltering heat of the past three or four weeks, Glen Jefferson, official weather forecaster, said yesterday with a broad smile.

"Yep," he said, "the heat wave is over, at least for the time being, and it will be moderate with afternoon showers.

Yesterday the thermometer reached an official high of 87 degrees, while the low was 70.

BEST WISHES—And a $50,000 war bond. That was Atlanta's contribution yesterday as the people of Los Angeles launched a campaign to build the U. S. S. Los Angeles. John L. Conner, left, chairman of the successful U. S. S. Atlanta campaign, was invited to help launch the Los Angeles drive, and arrived in the movie city yesterday. Here he is shown buying from Movie Actress Evelyn Keyes, a former Atlantan, $50,000 worth of war bonds for Atlantans and Atlanta's part in the Los Angeles campaign. Georgia's Russell Picked To Head Global War Trip

Churchill Sees Drive by Allies This Summer

By E. C. DANIEL.

LONDON, June 30.—(AP)—In a buoyant and cheering speech, Prime Minister Churchill today forecast thrusts this summer in the Mediterranean "and elsewhere," triumphantly reported a toll of 30-odd U-boats in May alone, and warned the Germans of an air offensive of ever greater wrath and destruction.

"Very probably there will be heavy fighting in the Mediterranean and elsewhere before the leaves of autumn fall," Britain's war leader and master phrasemaker told a victory-minded assembly in London's blitz-blackened Guildhall.

Confident War Review.

Churchill delivered a confident war review there after receiving the ancient capital's highest token of acclaim—the freedom of the city—and after a tour through streets of cheering citizens and soldiers of Allied nations.

And Churchill concerned himself earnestly with the Allied unity, declaring that upon British-American co-operation "depends more than upon any other factor the immediate future of the world," that "acting together we can help all nations safely into harbor and that if we divide all

Conner Helps Open California Ship Drive

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

LOS ANGELES, June 30.—John L. Conner, of Atlanta, Ga., chairman of the successful campaign to build a new U. S. S. Cruiser Atlanta, helped launch a campaign here today to build a new cruiser, the Los Angeles.

Conner was scheduled to buy $25,000 worth of war bonds at a campaign luncheon, but when he was approached by lovely Evelyn Keyes, Atlanta film star, he promptly doubled the ante to make Atlanta's contribution to the Los Angeles drive $50,000.

Conner said the purchase was made in honor of Georgia natives who are now in films, these including Keyes, Judy Canova, Jane Withers, Alice Talton, Miriam Hopkins and Melvyn Douglas.

Governor Ellis A. Arnall, of Georgia, sent a letter by Conner to Governor Earl Warren, of California, wishing the people here success in their Victory campaign and challenging them to surpass the Atlanta drive which netted $65,000,000.

"All of Georgia," the Governor wrote, "is proud of the part they played in the successful campaign to finance the purchase of a new cruiser Atlanta, and now we confidently expect California and Los Angeles to surpass our efforts—nevertheless, we offer the results as a challenge to you."

Mayor William B. Hartsfield, of the Georgia capital city, sent his best wishes. "The necessity of sacrifice and willingness to give our all are but ties that bind us closer from Georgia to California. May victory soon crown our efforts and peace come to our people."

The Georgia representative, Conner, later heard Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox tell a huge campaign crowd that the power to decide where the next blow will be struck in the Pacific "now rests with our side, and it will continue to rest with us for the duration."

Knox also predicted that the Germans and Italians won't be able to interrupt supply lines for "invasions" of Europe and that the Japanese won't have to wait too long to learn about this side's strategic decisions.

Addressing the inaugural rally of the Los Angeles campaign, Knox said:

"There is no branch of the Axis armed forces today—either to the east or the west of us—which cannot testify to the growing power of the United States and the United Nations.

"These Nazi and Italian forces were not able to cut or interrupt our supply lines to Africa, and they will not be able to halt the communications and supply lines which will lead to other invasions on European soil.

"In the Pacific, the Japanese are no longer in position to decide where the next blow will be struck.

"Our forces in the Pacific, in all categories, are steadily being strengthened, and with very definite ends in view. I can promise you that the Japanese will not have to wait too long a time to learn about some of these decisions."

Earlier at a press conference Knox had referred to the new United States offensive in the central Solomons as the beginning of an attack on Munda Bay and surrounding enemy bases. He said he had heard only word-of-mouth accounts of the new operation, and, shown a newspaper bearing the Navy's disclosure earlier in the day, commented, "That's interesting, isn't it?"

Knox declared the United States never has regarded the Pacific war as of importance secondary to the conflict in Europe. He expressed himself as "tremendously pleased" with American weapons, asserting that there never have been ships so heavily armed as those combatting the Axis, and that better planes than those of the United States do not exist.

Discussing strengthening of the American Navy, Knox said that in the year ending tomorrow, new construction of combatant ships will have increased by more than six times over the first year of the nation's new building program.

"But that is not the entire story," he continued. "In the six months remaining in this year of 1943, we will complete more new combatant ships than we completed in the 12 months between July 1, 1942, and July 1, 1943. And we will go into 1944 still producing at top speed."

Senator's Post Is Likened to That of Umpire

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP) Amid predictions that "they won't see enough to stick in their eye," five senators got unofficial clearance from the senate tonight for a trip around the globe in an Army bomber to visit American fighting forces in the battle zones and inspect their equipment.

Ending a three-month backstage controversy over the personnel of the inspection group, Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, told the senate he had reluctantly picked the members after conferences with General George C. Marshall, chief of staff; Secretary of War Stimson and Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon.

Barkley named Senator Russell, Democrat, Georgia, a dark horse, as chairman of the committee and split the other four places between the Truman war investigating committee and the senate military affairs committee, which had been battling with boyish enthusiasm for three months to carry off the coveted assignments.

Russell was named as a representative of the appropriations committee, with some senate wags suggesting privately that his position would be that of umpire between the other groups. Other members are Senators Chandler, Democrat, Kentucky, and Lodge,

U. S. Now Forced To Send Training Weapons Overseas

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—Lieutenant General Brehon Somervell, commanding general of the Army Service Forces, said in a magazine articles released today that the Army was so short of weapons and materiel that equipment used in training soldiers was being sent abroad for combat use.

Somervell, writing in Mill and Factory, a trade publication for industrial management, asserted that May output for the Army's supply program was $106,783,000 under the month's quota of $1,600,941,000. He attributed the drop to a number of factors, including floods, labor shortages and turn-over, work stoppage, but primarily to the "sedative" effect of good news from the battlefronts.

". . . One of the most important causes was over-confidence on the part of some segments of industry, labor and the public—the growing, false and damaging impression that we've got the war won, that we can let up now in the intensity of our efforts and that we can now begin planning for early resumption of manufacture of non-essential consumer goods which the war has denied us," the supply chief said.

"This is happening at a time when we are so short of weapons and materiel that we are having to take equipment being used to train our growing Army in this country and send it abroad for combat use. This not only seriously impairs our training program, but affects the morale of the troops."

Somervell said that the original 1943 military strategy laid out by the combined chiefs of staff with the approval of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, called for war machinery, equipment and supplies costing 92 billion dollars. The War Production Board, he said, reported such a program was beyond the capacity of the nation and the estimate was revised to 75 billion dollars.

Over-Confidence Blamed.

"Since our first and greatest need was for aircraft, cargo ships and Navy combat vessels, the major part of the reduction in 1943 goals had to be absorbed by the Army ground supply program," he said. "This meant a 25 per cent cut in the schedules the Army had planned for the year—one-fourth less equipment than the Army had determined to be necessary to accomplish the tasks assigned to it."

Under the program steady scheduled increases in production were achieved through April, he said, but added that "even with this schedule met, the Army will not be fully equipped until well into 1944."

Somervell said that "by far the greater part of the failure was due to psychological let-down—the over-confidence that has swept the country with favorable news from the battlefront."

U. S. Child Care Vote Leaves George Fearful

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—A wartime child care bill, authorizing the appropriation of $20,000,000 in government funds each year for co-operation with the states in day nursery and non-school-hour care for children of employed mothers, was passed by the senate today and sent to the house.

Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, said he recognized the desirability of the work, but expressed fear that the move marked "the

84 Take Oath of Citizenship in Ceremony Here

61 Civilian Aliens, 23 Soldiers Naturalized in Court.

A Chinese, an Indian and a Liberian, stood side-by-side yesterday as they took the oath of citizenship of the United States at a naturalization ceremony in federal court—the first time members of these three nationalities have been granted citizenship in district court here.

Speaking to the class of 61 civilian aliens and 23 alien-born soldiers who were granted citizenship, Judge Robert L. Russell expressed belief that in no other land would it be possible to find—in wartime—the courts still open and functioning freely, and in which anyone could assume a new citizenship.

Benefiting Ceremony.

"As this court admits you to the family of American citizens, I can but reflect you are witnessing and benefiting by a ceremony which offers a most striking example of the difference of philosophy of government between a democracy such as America and the totalitarian states with which we are now at war, and will defeat by the effort, blood and lives of brave American citizens," he said.

Lieutenant Julius Foo Yee Sue, born near Canton, China, is the first native of China to become an American citizen in the federal court of the northern district of Georgia.

An amendment to the naturalization laws permitting all aliens, regardless of nationality or color, to become citizens of the United States provided they are serving in the United States Army during wartime, makes it possible for natives of China and India to become naturalized through regular proceedings if the petitioner is serving in the armed forces, federal officials explained.

Stationed at Air Base.

Stationed at the Army Air Base here, where he is the only medical officer, Lieutenant Sue said he had been waiting a long time for this, as he caressingly held the American flag the Daughters of the American Revolution presented each person naturalized.

A resident of Portland, Ore., where his mother, sister and brother now live, the 28-year-old officer came to American 15 years ago and since that time has worked his way through the University of Oregon School of Medicine, served an internship at St. Catherine's hospital at East Chicago, Ind., and also served as house doctor at East Chicago six months before entering the Army five months ago.

"Only in America could I have done all this," the former Chinese said with a broad smile. "I owe a lot to this land of opportunity."

Private Ambados Mulay, the first native of India to be naturalized here, came to the United States 22 years ago to complete his formal education, but liked this country so well he did not return to India after getting his Ph. D. degree.

Entered U. S. at 17.

Born in Nagpur, Central Province, India, Mulay entered this country from Calcutta, at the age of 17. Upon graduation from the University of California, he became a professor of chemistry, and at the time of his enlistment in the American Army, a few months ago, he was a research chemist for the University of California. At present he is stationed with the Fourth Service Medical Laboratory at Fort McPherson.

Private First Class Gunther Jack Ostheleimer, formerly of Germany, until six years ago when he migrated to America with his twin brother, also became a citizen of the "best country in the world" yesterday.

"My brother and I came to America because of the persecutions in Germany and I am happy to be the first member of my family to be a member of the American Army and also to receive my citizenship. Others in my family came over three years ago," he said.

Stationed at the Army Ordnance Depot here, Private First Class Osthelemier was a machinist in New York before going into the Army.

Liberian Naturalized.

John Henry Zeigler, a physician of LaGrange, came to this country a number of years ago from Liberia, and is the first Liberian to appear for naturalization in this court.

Youngest alien to be naturalized, so far as length of time in this country is concerned, was Private Sidney Kessler, who came over from France four years ago.

A native of Poland, Kessler said his stay in America was sheer luck as he came over on a business trip as a fashion expert on furs in 1939, but could not get sailing accommodations back, so he had to stay. "That was my lucky day," he said.

Private Kessler, stationed at the Atlanta Ordnance Depot here, has a brother in a German concentration camp in France and also a brother in Switzerland who escaped from the Germans. "I wish they could get to America," he said.

Foreign countries represented at the hearing yesterday with natives petitioning citizenship included Greece, Newfoundland, Cuba, England, Canada, Russia, Scotland, France, Turkey, Syria, Poland, Ireland, Bulgaria, Germany, Austria, Latvia, Lebanon and Rumania.

In his address to the group, Judge Russell cited the responsibilities of good American citizens. "Obedience to law, loyalty to our principles of government, participation in democratic processes, interest in the welfare of our fellowman, and willingness to freely sacrifice our money and our lives, if need be, to defend the United States of America, and our form of government."

"It is hoped that you have been impressed by the example of loyalty and unselfishness of those of your neighbors who were good Americans," he continued, "or maybe you have had neighbors who did not think it proper or excusable to hoard commodities which were scarce or even rumored likely to become so; who did not think it right even in wartime to fudge and chisel on their ration coupons; or who were willing to accept the existence of war as an opportunity to wrongfully exercise their greed and wrongfully secure and swell their monetary gain. Such people, even though possessed of the privilege of American citizenship by birth, are not the true Americans, upon whom we must rely to maintain America," he added.

and able administrators of the British empire, on what they saw in the future and especially in the future of the colonial system and of our joint relations with the many peoples of the East.

What I got was Rudyard Kipling, untainted even with the liberalism of Cecil Rhodes.

The Atlantic Charter most of them had read about. That it might affect their careers or their thinking had never occurred to any of them.

That evening started in my mind a conviction which was to grow strong in the days that followed it in the Middle East:

That brilliant victories in the field will not win for us this war now going on in the far reaches of the world, that only new men and new ideas in the machinery of our relations with the peoples of the East can win the victory without which any peace will be only another armistice.

From Cairo to Teheran, we flew above trade routes and over cities which are as old as anything in our civilization and which have kept the variety and the contrasts of thousands of years of history.

In the air, between stops, an airplane gives a modern traveler a chance to map in his mind the land he is flying over.

From Beirut to Lydda, to Bagdad, to Teheran, we had fairly long flights on which to compare notes and to sort out impressions.

(During this portion of Mr. Willkie's tour he discussed the Middle East's social and economic problems with such leaders as Awni Bey Abdul Hadi, Arab leader who claims all of Palestine for his people, and Miss Henrietta Szold, 80-year-old founder of Hadassah, who has dedicated her life to the establishment of a national homeland for the Jews in the Holy Land.

Persia's Ruler Has First Plane Ride With Willkie

(He spoke also with the ruler of Iran (Persia), Mohammed Shah Pahlavi, who had his first airplane ride with Mr. Willkie's party.)

Before we left Iran for the Soviet Union, I had made up my own mind about the answers to some of the most immediate and pressing questions I had asked myself about the Middle East.

In the first place, I was convinced that all these peoples were more on our side than against us.

In the second place, I was convinced that some sort of yeast was at work in nearly all the places I visited.

Even the strictest kind of neutrality cannot keep the war from working its profound and violent changes on all the peoples who live in this region. Their lives will change more in the next 10 years than they have in the last 10 centuries.

In the third place, I found no automatic guarantee that these changes will be in our favor.

I found polite but skeptical people, who met my questions about their problems and difficulties with polite but ironic questions about their own.

The maladjustments of races in America came up frequently, and I believe every government official I talked to wondered about our relations to Vichy.

Arab and Jew were curious to know if our expressions of freedom meant only new and enlarged mandated areas which in the Lebanon and Syria and Palestine, rightly or wrongly, had come to mean to them a form of foreign tyranny.

Arnall Names Sanford Head Of Herty Board

Other Officers Also Appointed in Reorganization of Group.

Reorganization of the Herty Foundation board under legislation enacted by the last general assembly was announced by Governor Arnall yesterday, naming Charles S. Sanford, Savannah banker and son of Chancellor S. V. Sanford, of the State University System, as chairman of the board for a term ending in 1946.

He succeeds John S. Clements, of Alamo.

George Bazemore, Waycross banker, was named to succeed Elliott Reid, of Savannah, deceased; Dave B. Turner, of Statesboro, editor of the Bulloch County Herald, was appointed to succeed W. T. Anderson, editor of the Macon Telegraph, and Hadley S. Brown, of Brunswick, real estate dealer and former state senator was named to succeed Phillip Morgan, of Savannah.

James Fowler, of Soperton, a former member of the house whose term on the board had expired, was reappointed for a term lasting until February, 1948.

Legislation by Senator David S. Atkinson vacated the terms of all board members who had not been confirmed by the senate. Arnall said this "knocked out" Clements, Anderson and Morgan.

One of the first duties of the reorganized board, which has supervision over the Herty laboratory at Savannah, will be the selection of an executive director. This position has been vacant since the death of Reid, who was director of the laboratory as well as a member of the board.

RAF Shoots Up 20 Trains in North France

LONDON, June 30.—(AP)—Britain spent its sixth day without sighting an enemy plane today while Mustangs and Typhoons shot up 20 locomotives in sweeps over northern France to cap a record month of aerial warfare in which the RAF alone dropped at least 13,500 tons of explosives on German targets.

American Flying Fortresses struck Le Mans, France, without loss at twilight Tuesday, and the RAF damaged three of the six German ships encountered by night off Dunkirk at a cost of one plane amid an array of heartening indications of mounting Allied superiority.

Allied planes continued to attack the French coastal area tonight. A formation of fighters was seen returning to England's southeast coast at a height of 20,000 feet after a number of heavy explosions had been heard for some time across the strait.

While German propaganda outlets talked of a great "reprisal air force" under construction, the Axis' preoccupation with its defenses was underscored by a parliamentary announcement that Britain's civil defense establishment had been cut one-third in the last year, and that a further cut of 12½ per cent is under way.

Many of the Fortresses which flew to Le Mans, airplane engine and chemical center 130 miles southwest of Paris, returned with their dangerous bomb cargoes. This was in line with a policy of not dropping their explosives unless targets are clearly visible. The communique itself gave no results of the American raid, apparently because of cloud layers making observation difficult.

Squadrons of U. S. Thunderbolt fighters accompanying the bombers shot down at least two enemy fighters, and the Fortresses also destroyed a number of them, the communique said.

It was the first time Le Mans had been attacked by the Americans, and the first occasion since the Antwerp raid May 4 that the Eighth Air Force airmen emerged without loss.

Yolande Wins; Willkie Sends His Autograph

The signature of Wendell Willkie used as the byline for his story, "One World," now appearing in The Constitution, is the one sent to Constitution Staff Writer Yolande Gwin, for her copy of the best seller. After a discussion around The Constitution office as to whether he would give autographs, Miss Gwin wrote Willkie of the bet. Two signatures of the 1940 presidential candidate was the answer to the letter. One was signed to the letter and a separate one was for Miss Gwin's book.

The letter follows:

My dear Miss Gwin:

My apologies for the belated acknowledgement of your letter of April 28th. I have been on the go day and night since the publication of my book, "One World," and my personal correspondence has fallen somewhat in arrears.

You win the bet. Of course, I am happy to send you my autograph for your copy of "One World."

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) WENDELL WILLKIE.

ON JOB—Mrs. Roy G. Vinson takes pencil in hand to list local chairwomen in the American Legion Auxiliary drive to enlist Georgia women in the Marine Corps Women's Reserve.

June Bank Clearings Gain Over Last Year

Bank clearings yesterday totaled $21,900,000, compared with a total of $24,300,000 for the same date last year, it was reported by the Atlanta Clearing House Association.

For June this year, however, the total was $526,400,000, compared with $408,600,000 for the same month last year.

Mrs. Vinson Plans Marine Corps Drive

Will Tell Story of Group and Stress Need for Women.

Every woman in Georgia will be told the story of the Marine Corps women's reserve under the program being outlined by Mrs. Roy G. Vinson, of Atlanta, chairman of the American Legion Auxiliary's Marine recruting drive.

Mrs. Vinson, who has held every office possible in Georgia Legion Auxiliary affairs, was recently chosen by Mrs. John Williams, new president of the Georgia department, Legion Auxiliary. Mrs. Vinson was president of the department in 1940-41, and last year was national executive committeewoman from Georgia.

"Now I'm just a member, and I've been waiting for an assignment on some program," Mrs. Vinson said.

During July, which has been designated as "Free a Marine to Fight" month in Georgia, members of the Auxiliary hope to tell every woman in the state of the need for women Marines.

"Every woman enlisted will take the place of a trained, fighting man in shore jobs in the continental United States," Mrs. Vinson added. "They will be trained and assigned to duties in 68 occupations in which women are being used by the Marine Corps."

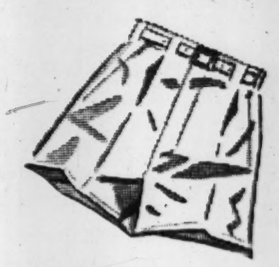

Mrs. Vinson plans to name her 117 local chairwomen soon. She lives at the Colonial Terrace hotel.

N. M. U. Invitation Declined by Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—President Roosevelt received an invitation today from the National Maritime Union to address its annual convention starting July 6 in New York City, but he had to decline.

Joseph Curran, union president, said Mr. Roosevelt might send a message to the assemblage instead.

Off the Assembly Line

By CORPORAL J. K. SHERROW.

When a fella needs a friend, he'll find one in Mrs. Eula B. Duffee, of Jonesboro, who operates the depot post office.

Known to scores of soldiers as "Mother Duffee," her home is open nightly to soldiers and an evening has never passed since December 7, 1941, without several lads in khaki as her guests.

"Mother Duffee" is an ideal hostess. She has a badminton court in the back yard and she's an expert player, too. Each Tuesday night is set aside for the boys at the message center. T-4's Carl Klingenfus and John J. Kosman and Privates First Class Al G. Piccucci and Billy Dymott are on hand to continue their badminton tournament.

When it comes to horseshoe pitching, "Ma" can ring the peg as good as any of the boys. On rainy evenings ping pong and gin rummy are the features in the house with nice tall, cool soft drinks served.

Mrs. Duffee is a firm believer that it's the little things in life that count, and she proves it by remembering the birthdays and anniversary dates of her adopted sons with greeting cards or a sweet letter.

Soldiers who leave Atlanta will remember people like "Ma" Duffee and hundreds of other Atlantans like her when they are on fighting fronts—they'll know that the very important American home front is holding.

Soldier-students will attend classes on Saturdays beginning July 5 when the ordnance automotive school goes on a six-day, 48-hour week basis. Classes will continue from 7:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. without a cut in the length of the courses.

Plans are underway to continue the three hours per week of physical instruction in conjunction with the courses. In the past the men received 15 minutes of calisthenics five days per week and an hour-and-a-half hike on Saturdays.

"The Battle of Britain," a War Department film, will be shown to both military and civilian personnel of the depot this week, beginning at 7:45 a. m. at post theater No. 1.

Requests for magazines and periodicals from the special service section show what Johnny Doughboy likes to read in his spare time. The literature is furnished for company dayrooms.

War magazines and journals topped the lists submitted with sports, humor and detective stories running a close second; weserns ran third. Members of several units requested farm and garden magazines; comic books were on every list, and one G. I. guy wants "True Confessions." Yank, the Army weekly, headed every list.

An official station band has been authorized this week for the ordnance unit training center with 29 enlisted members. Master Sergeant Luther L. Tanner has been named bandmaster. He formerly served as sergeant major at battalion headquarters since the depot was first activated, devoting his spare time to rehearsing and playing for retreat parades and post dances.

Master Sergeant Emory H. Smith, formerly first sergeant of headquarters and headquarters detachment, is the new battalion sergeant major replaced at the detachment by First Sergeant George W. Roeder, formerly top kick of the Second Provisional Company.

NO TALL STORY—Is this picture of Harvey H. Tisinger, assistant United States attorney, as he sits atop a ladder five feet high to pick his "wonder" beans.

H. H. Tisinger Turning Out 'Wonder' Beans

I'm Always Fighting Two Things—Criminals and Insects, He Says.

By MARIE SMITH.

Harvey H. Tisinger, assistant United States attorney, serves a double life these days.

When you don't find him in federal court prosecuting criminals and pleading against them in their efforts to secure freedom through writs of habeas corpus, you'll find him farming in his "backyard" victory garden at 876 Highland terrace, N. E.

Fights Two Things.

"I'm always fighting the two things I hate most of all—criminals and insects," Tisinger said yesterday and started off on his latest story, which turned out not to be so tall, about the beans in his victory garden and the way he has rid them of insects.

Tisinger doesn't attack his insects with spray gun or powder, but merely plants his beans in the shade—where the beetles and bugs don't flourish so well.

Proudly looking over his bean crop which looks almost like a forest of Jack's beanstalks, Tisinger attributes the growth and production of his bean stalks which are laden with long, slender beans, to the fact his beans are grown in the shade of the tall oaks in his yard and that he gives them moisture through irrigation rather than pouring water on the growing plants.

Lot About Farming.

"I know a lot about farming," Tisinger said yesterday as he waved his farmer's hat toward the garden wherein are growing tomato plants six and seven feet high and beans so high he sits on a stepladder to pick them. "Between law classes at the University of Georgia, I studied agriculture and then I was reared on a farm."

"Tisinger, who expects to get enough vegetables from his garden to supply his table all summer and to fill 300 quarts for winter food, said there is no excuse for complaints of ration point shortages or inability to secure good food.

"Everybody can have a victory garden," he said.

Tisinger does most of the work in his garden himself, with the help of his wife, and occasionally the hiring of a prisoner on parole for several days' work in the garden.

In addition to having his own backyard farm, Tisinger has also built his own cannery in his backyard where he cans 50 quarts at a time on a furnace which in out-of-canning season he calls his "barbecue pit."

MacArthur Leads Allied Capture of Two More Islands

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, July 1.—(Thursday)—(AP)—Allied land, naval and air forces under the personal direction of General Douglas MacArthur have occupied the Trobriand and Woodlark island groups between New Guinea and the Solomon islands and are attacking the neighboring New Georgia island and are engaging Japanese land forces near Salamaua on New Guinea, it was announced today.

The occupation of the Trobriand and Woodlark groups was accomplished without opposition, apparently unknown to the enemy, a communique said. In the New Georgia group American forces have successfully landed on both New Georgia and Rendova islands and are engaging the enemy's defense, it added.

"All elements of ground, naval and air forces are being employed in the closest synchronization," the communique said.

Fighting was in progress at Nassau bay, a few miles from Salamaua, where American forces affected a landing shortly after midnight on the heels of concentrated bombing by attack planes and medium bombers.

The planes also carried out "strafing raids against enemy positions on the bay shore and along the Bitoi river," the communique said.

Allied Troops Land On Rendova Island

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—American forces launching their long-expected campaign to break Japan's South Pacific defenses have landed on Rendova island in the enemy-held central Solomons, the Navy announced today, and violent fighting was in prospect—if it had not already begun.

The Japanese air base at Munda, New Georgia island, only five miles from mountainous Rendova, appeared to be the immediate objective of Admiral William F. Halsey's powerful aggregation of land, sea and air fighters, but in the absence of any official comment there remained the possibility that Halsey is after some more significant prize.

A 22-word Navy communique reported the immensely important operation, which by some standards shaped up as the first thoroughly offensive campaign of the war against Japan. The communique said.

"On June 30, during the early morning, combined U. S. forces landed on Rendova island, New Georgia group. No details have been received."

Savannah Woman Killed in Crash

FERNANDINA, Fla., June 30. (AP)—Joseph R. Tyson, of Savannah, and his two-year-old son were in a serious condition today in the Nassau county hospital as the result of an automobile accident Sunday night in which Tyson's wife, Mrs. Bertie Tyson, was killed.

The family was driving from Fernandina to Brunswick, where Tyson is employed in a shipyard, when the accident occurred, according to police. The car left the road and became wedged under a low bridge.

Drive for Voluntary Cut In Power Use Planned

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP) A drive for voluntary curtailment in the use of electricity will be mapped here tomorrow by a "task force" of the electric industry with officials of the Office of War Utilities.

The campaign for savings in home and commercial use of power will be promoted by nation-wide advertising. It was projected as an alternative to a nation-wide "brown-out" which officials of the Office of War Utilities have feared might be necessary.

State Health Paper In Navy Booklet

A paper based on research of health conditions in Georgia shipyards, written by Dr. Lester M. Petrie, director of the industrial hygiene service of the State Department of Health, has been incorporated in a booklet issued by the Navy and the Maritime Commission, it was disclosed yesterday.

The booklet is called "Minimum Requirements for Safety and Industrial Health in Contract Shipyards," and incorporates Dr. Lester's paper entitled "Administrative and Working Regulationships Between the Georgia Industrial Hygiene Service and the United States Maritime Commission."

The Ration Counter...

Your questions about all phases of the various rationing programs will be answered authoritatively by the Ration Counter. Telephone your questions to WAlnut 3876 between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. Inquiries by mail must be accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope. They should be addressed to the Ration Counter, care The Constitution, Atlanta.

"I received the Ration Books 3 for all my family the other day except for my daughter," one Atlantan wrote yesterday. "Will her book come in a few days or should I make another application for her?"

In all probability, her daughter's ration book will show up in a week or so, but even if it doesn't, another application cannot be made until after the first of August. At that time, if the book is still missing, she should go to her county rationing board, present the stub she kept when mailing in her No. 3 ration book application, and have the matter checked.

The book will be issued at that time, which will be a few weeks before the new books go into effect.

Evening Slippers To Be Released From Rationing July 7

Any girl who is looking forward to some big formal dance with a slightly depressed sensation because she has no gold or silver evening slippers will perk up at the news that these shoes are to be released from rationing July 7.

Domestic riding boots, baseball, track and football shoes also will be taken off the ration list at that time.

In making this announcement yesterday, OPA said that evening slippers made with gold or silver uppers or with real or imitation leather are no longer being manufactured in response to an order by the War Production Board.

Athletic shoes, the announcement continued, are not suitable for general wear and their production is limited, making rationing unnecessary.

Manufacture of Riding Boots Is Discontinued Entirely

Manufacture of riding boots has been stopped entirely. While boots now in process of manufacture may be purchased without a ration coupon beginning July 7, boots imported into this country after that date still will require a coupon.

Rationing certificates for tires and tubes may be used at any time the holder finds convenient. There was formerly a 30-day limit after issuance of this certificate from the ration board, but this deadline now has been cancelled.

Although eligibility regulations on grade III tires have been tightened, innertube eligibility requirements remain the same, OPA announced yesterday. There are no rationing restrictions on the sale of used passenger car or truck innertubes.

Nation-wide Rationing of Stoves To Be Delayed Until Mid-August

Nation-wide rationing of heating and cooking stoves has been delayed until mid-August, it was learned here yesterday.

OPA announced the postponement in order to consider in the plan suggestions from representatives of the stove industry.

This rationing program first was scheduled to become effective the end of June.

"T" gasoline coupons expired yesterday, and today the "TT" stamps go into use. This change was made, OPA said, in an effort to put a stop to the use of any counterfeit "T" stamps.

Extra Gas Not Available To End Up Business Matters Before Induction

One Atlanta man, who recently received his "Greetings" from Uncle Sam, wondered yesterday if he could get a few gallons of gasoline to use in finishing up his business before he goes into the service next week.

Sorry, said OPA, but not until he is actually in the service and comes home on furlough will he be able to get any extra gasoline.

He will have to wind up his affairs on the gasoline he has left from his regular ration.

Churchill Sees Big Drive by Allies This Summer

will toss and drift for a long time on dark and stormy seas."

His war analysis repeated the Allied demand for "unconditional surrender" of "the Nazi, Fascist and Japanese tyrannies," and again the prime minister promised that should Japan still stand when Germany and Italy are toppled, "every man, every ship and every airplane in the King's service that can be moved to the Pacific" will be sent there to fight "as many years as are needed to make the Japanese in their turn submit or bite the dust."

Predicts Heavy Fighting.

Of invasion, he stated directly only the prediction of probably heavy fighting.

Of the submarine war, he declared that in May the Nazis made a determined effort to halt the Allied convoy bridge from the United States to Britain, but that this vital battle "ended in the total defeat of the U-boat attack."

"More than 30 U-boats were certainly destroyed in May," and since mid-May "scarcely a single merchant ship has been sunk in the whole of the north Atlantic," Churchill announced.

Because of this "we have had in June the best month we have ever known" in the war, he said, and shipyards of the United States, Britain and Canada have produced between "seven and ten times as much as our losses from enemy action in the month of June."

"Bad Patches" Ahead.

"Bad patches" might still lie ahead, and "we must redouble our efforts and ingenuity" against submarines, he cautioned, but—since U-boat warfare is held out to the Germans as their last great hope—these successes are bringing the Nazis "a somewhat raw and bleak outlook."

As to the air, Churchill disclosed that the RAF alone has dropped 52,500 tons of bombs upon Germany in the first half of 1943, or 35 times the weight dropped by the Nazis upon Britain in the same period.

"During the summer our main attack has been upon the mainspring of German war industry—in the Ruhr—but as the nights become longer and as the United States Air Force becomes more numerous our strong arms will lengthen both by night and day and there is no industrial or military target in Germany that will not receive as we deem necessary the utmost application of exterminating force," he declared.

Praises U. S. Air Blows.

Churchill praised the daylight blows by the U. S. Air Force as inflicting "grave injury on the sensitive nerve center" of German war production, and said the Allied attacks would follow German industry to small towns as big ones are "disposed of."

Russia "presently . . . will contribute an additional quota to the total blitz," he added.

Of Mussolini—who was urged earlier today by Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in a speech in commons to "accept the unconditional surrender terms offered to him"—Churchill said he and his people are suffering from the war of nerves.

"So far they have only been subjected to preliminary and discursive bombardments, but they already are speculating feverisnly where the blow will fall and what will be its weight," he remarked.

The Allies do not intend to "relieve that anxiety" for Mussolini or for Hitler, whose worries over Allied invasion plans "may perhaps have led to the remarkable long delay of the opening of the promised German offensive against Russia," Churchill added.

"Anxieties Will Grow."

Their anxieties "will grow from week to week and from month to month," he continued. He warned peoples of Allied nations against overconfidence, stressing the enormous difficulties of amphibious warfare.

Allied co-operation in war and peace was emphasized by the prime minister.

He spoke of "the great republic of the United States whose power arouses no fear and whose pre-eminence excites no jealousy in British bosoms," adding:

"Upon the association and intimate alignment of the policy of the United States and the British Commonwealth and Empire depends more than upon any other factor the immediate future of the world.

"If they walk or, if need be, march together in harmony and in accordance with the moral and political conceptions to which the English-speaking peoples have given birth and which are frequently referred to in the Atlantic Charter, all will be well. If they fall apart and wander astray from the lines of their destiny there will be no end or measure to the miseries and confusion which would mark modern civilization."

Friendship for Russia.

Churchill told of friendship for Russia, of great hopes for China's future and of a revival of the "true greatness of France," in declaring that the United States and Britain must act together to secure peace and safety.

Expressing pride in the empire, Churchill declared "we seek no profit, we want no territory or aggrandizement. We expect no reward and we will accept no compromise." The empire is united, he said, adding he was "not at all ashamed of the word empire."

The prime minister defined unconditional surrender to mean that the whole power of the Axis to resist "must be completely broken and that they must yield themselves absolutely to our justice and mercy. It also means that we must take all those far-sighted measures which are necessary to prevent the world from being again convulsed and wrecked and blackened by their calculated blows and ferocious aggression."

Churchill was roundly cheered both on his way to the Guildhall in a horse-drawn carriage, and when he entered the hall which had been fired by Nazi bombs in December, 1940. He received the tribute of the freedom of the city—represented by a plaque in a casket made from English oak saved from part of the hall's burned roof—from the lord mayor, Sir Samuel Joseph.

The lord mayor was robed in gold and black and the aldermen wore red, black and ermined-lined robes. Churchill wore morning clothes. His wife and two daughters accompanied him, the latter in uniforms.

The Guildhall was crowded with celebrities, including Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell, new viceroy of India.

War Worker Spends Entire Pay for Bonds

ST. LOUIS.—Mrs. Ollie Edith Ellis Sheets, of St. Louis, a war plant worker, has pledged her entire wages to buy war bonds.

Acknowledgeing she doesn't have to work for a living, Mrs. Sheets said she took the job because she believed she was not doing enough for the battle agains the Axis by staying at home.

"I can take a double crack at the Axis—by working in a war plant and using my wages to buy war bonds," Mrs. Sheets said.

Baby Chick Industry Doubled

Kansan Tells Georgia Amateurs How To Succeed.

By JANE NOLAND.

Amateur chicken raisers who are puzzling over farm catalogs, stymied by technical terms, and spending nights disconsolately watching sick chicks stumble around their homemade brooders should take heart at the record of Dr. E. E. Boyd, of Stafford, Kan.

In Atlanta yesterday for the one-day session of the Georgia Baby Chick Association at the Ansley hotel Dr. Boyd, who is vice president of the International Association and owns a 100,000-egg hatchery, confided that he was an amateur himself only 15 years ago—that doctor before his name stands for dentist.

"I was a dentist all my adult life until 15 years ago," he said, "when I had to quit because of my health and started raising chickens in a homemade brooder in my back yard as a hobby."

Hobby Splits Bounds.

The hobby grew all out of bounds, and the organization he now serves as vice president represents almost the entire poultry industry in the United States, which this year will turn out 4,780,000,000 dozen eggs, 4,000,000,000 pounds of poultry meat, and 560,000,000 pounds of turkey meat if the feed situation grows no worse.

"That feed shortage is really something," Boyd mused. "In the first place, this country is raising twice as much livestock this year as ever before. Then, most of our fisheries, from which we obtained fish meal for feed, are closed, and the meat scraps we once brought in from Argentina have been displaced by war cargos. Add to that the fact that grain crops are low this year, and you see what I am talking about."

Commenting on the fact the baby chick industry has more than doubled in the past year, Boyd pointed to the bumper crop of backyard farmers that has sprung up with the advent of meat rationing.

"Do the Job Right."

"I think it's a fine thing—with reservations," he smiled. "But before he starts out to raise chicks a person should talk to a poultryman and find out the whys and wherefores. There's no sense in wasting all that feed if he's not going to do the job right."

For an average city yard, Boyd estimated an amateur could handle about 50 chicks—"but before you ever get the chicks these days it's wise to be sure you'll have feed for them," he added.

He also warned against overcrowding—"the greatest cause of chick mortality."

The baby chick business hasn't tangled much with the government, according to Boyd.

"There is no ceiling price on baby chicks, and the price hasn't gone up more than three cents a chick since the war," he said.

"However, hatcherymen are hard pressed to make any money out of chick raising, these days, as the price of feed has gone up and in many places feed is almost nil."

He suggested that a ceiling price on breeding eggs might be the answer to part of the hatcheryman's price troubles.

Dump Trucks' Rental Rates Listed by OPA

Maximum rental rates for dump trucks which are now used almost exclusively in war construction work has been established by the Office of Price Administration effective today, it was announced yesterday by Joseph J. Spengler, regional OPA price executive.

Dollars and cents charges per hour, less the operator's wages, are established according to the size of the truck and method of loading.

In the following table of typical hourly charges, column A rates apply where the loading is performed by power-loading devices except where the material is processed and in stock piles at a commercial producing plant, at point of construction or at an intermediate point of transfer; column B where the loading is done by hand and where the average mileage of vehicle does not exceed eight miles per hour, and column C rates apply where transportation or loading is performed under other conditions, or the loading is by hopper, chute, bunker or conveyor.

Up to 3	$1.50	$1.20	$1.35
3 to 4	1.80	1.45	1.65
4 to 5	2.25	1.80	2.05
5 to 6	2.40	1.95	2.15
6 to 7	2.65	2.15	2.40

Spengler said specifically that maximum rental prices for dump trucks leased on a fully operated basis are calculated on the basis of hours of actual use of the truck multiplied by the applicable charge per hour (according to the capacity of the truck), plus 135 per cent of the hourly wage for the operator of such truck at the rate prevailing on March 31, 1942, in the job-site area where the vehicle is used.

Negroes To Hold Five Bond Rallies

Bond rallies at each of the five Negro housing projects, topped off by a mammoth bond rally at Morris Brown College, and featuring a jeep parade downtown, will be staged by the Atlanta Service Group war bond committee and the Atlanta Council of Negro Women Monday, it was announced yesterday.

Observing "We Serve America Week," representatives of practically every Negro organization in the city will participate in the parade at the college.

Jeep rides will be given those persons who convert their stamp books into bonds on Independent Day. Private automobile rides will be given to those who are not able to fill their books, but who can buy five dollars worth of stamps.

You can pick up many bargains by picking up and reading the Want Ad pages of The Constitution.

REMEMBER

This Short Cut

When Placing a Long Distance Call

Give the Name of the City You're Calling Just as Soon as "Long Distance" Answers

When you must make a Long Distance call, save time by giving the Long Distance operator the name of the place you want just as soon as she answers. This enables her to see at once if a circuit is available for your call. Then if a circuit is open she will take the other details of your call and start making the connection at once.

If a circuit is not available, she will connect you with a special operator who will take the details of your call and give you the length of delay expected in completing it.

The details of your call should be given in this order: 1. Name of the place you are calling; 2. The telephone number you want, if known — otherwise the name and address of the person you are calling or in case of a firm, the name only; 3. On person-to-person calls, the name of the person to whom you wish to speak; 4. The number of the telephone from which you are talking.

Army's Rank, File Good to Reporters, Ernie Pyle Says

By ERNIE JYLE.

NORTH AFRICA.—(By Wireless)—As I have said before in these columns, the Army is almost without exception good to correspondents at the front. I have never yet been treated uncivilly, and usually officers and men will go out of their way to help you.

I remember one instance when another correspondent and I were making a trip of several hundred miles in a jeep with half the windshield missing. Riding behind a glassless windshield gets pretty rugged, even in good weather. All along the way we would drop into motor pools and ordnance depots, trying to get some glass. But there simply wasn't any.

Then one day we happened to stop at a small camp merely to inquire the way to a nearby airdrome. And the officer in charge asked out of a clear sky if we would like to have our windshield fixed. We said we sure would, but there wasn't any glass. He said:

Fortress Windshield.

"Maybe we can find some. Since you're staying all night at the airdrome, just forget about it. I'll find your jeep where you leave it, and we'll fix it."

And sure enough, a couple of hours later here came the officer and two men with a nice piece of glass. They had cut it from the windshield of a wrecked Flying Fortress, and it made a much better windshield than the original.

There was no reason for them to do it at all, except that they were just nice people. Our benefactors in this case were Lieutenant James O'Connor, of Worchester, Mass., and Sergeants Ernest Kelly, Spokane, Wash., and Lawrence Hunter, Pensacola, Fla.

I am having medals struck off for them on my private medal-machine.

Family of Sergeants.

The other day at one of the airdromes I got to talking with a young fellow who is one of four brothers in service. Such an odd thing happened to them last year that I think you'd be interested in hearing about it.

This young man is Sergeant Ray Swim, who used to work in Denver, but whose real home is Grand Junction, Colo., where his father is a farmer. Ray's three brothers are also sergeants, to wit, Sergeant Ralph, at Lowry Field, Denver; Sergeant William, at Fort Logan, Denver; Sergeant Orville, somewhere in Australia.

Now we go back to the spring of 1942. Ray was then in the bombardier school at Midland, Texas. He got a few days' leave and decided to go home. He just got on a train and started. He didn't even let the folks know he was coming.

When he got off the train at Grand Junction, he bumped into one of the other brothers, who had also just arrived from camp unannounced. What a coincidence, they thought.

Fourth Brother in Fold.

They shook hands and walked around the corner, and there was a third brother, under the same circumstances. And before they got out of town, damned if they didn't pick up the fourth brother, who had also arrived home unexpectedly. So there they were—neither of the four had known the others were coming, their parents hadn't known any of them were coming, and it was the first time the whole family had been together in five years. And to top it all off, it happened on Mother's Day.

The boys' mother was almost overcome. They thought for a while they would have to call a doctor for her. But I don't think the doctors know how to prescribe for sheer joy.

Ragged Arabs.

If there is one single scene that could be described as typifying North Africa to the American soldier, it's the sight of a ragged Arab standing along the roadside holding up an egg between his thumb and forefiner, trying to sell it. Through this individual bartering I suppose the Arabs have sold billions of eggs to American soldiers. Apropos of this, Bill Stoneman, of the Chicago Daily News, and Drew Middleton, of the New York Times, were riding along one day and Bill remarked that he supposed the most difficult feat in Africa would be to reverse the process and sell an egg to an Arab. Drew said: "Oh, I don't know," and the bet was on.

Drew bet 200 francs he'd sell an egg to an Arab before September 1. No tricks will be allowed. It has to be a legitimate sale, although Drew is permitted to sell as cheaply as he wishes. So now you see him, every time he goes out into the country, jumping out of his car at frequent intervals, rushing over to a bunch of Arabs, holding out his egg and starting his pleading sales talk of "Oeuf, deux francs." The Arabs just turn and walk away.

Drew admits privately that he has slight hope of winning his bet. It's harder than selling coals in Newcastle. And the worst part of it is that Drew, being honest, won't palm off stale merchandise, so he has to go out and pay five francs for a frash egg every time he starts on one of his futile selling trips.

FBI Captures Delinski in Pasco, Wash.

Ottley Kidnaper Escaped From Reidsville Prison Last August.

William Randolph Delinski, 27, who kidnaped John K. Ottley Sr. in 1933 and escaped from Reidsville prison last August, was arrested Tuesday at Pasco, Wash., by the FBI, F. R. Hammack, agent in charge of the Atlanta office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, disclosed yesterday.

Delinski was being sought by the FBI for violation of the selective service act in failing to register, a complaint filed against him January 12 in the southern district of Georgia, Hammack said.

The object of a nation-wide search since his escape from Reidsville prison last August 9, Delinski was serving a 20-year sentence for the kidnaping of Ottley, president of the First National Bank of Atlanta.

Delinski seized Ottley as he came out of his Peachtree road home on his way to the bank one morning and, with the aid of a teen-age south Georgia schoolboy, blindfolded him and took him to the Chattahoochee bottomlands, where Ottley talked the boy into releasing him.

Delinski escaped from prison in 1937 and was recaptured two months later in Cincinnati, prison records show.

Mrs. C. E. Brantley, of Route 1, Decatur, a member of a pioneer family of DeKalb county, died early yesterday at the residence.

She was the daughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. James T. Kelly. Her father was the founder of Kelly Methodist church.

Mrs. Brantley organized and directed, as president, the first Parent-Teachers' Association in the Panthersville district in which she lived.

Survivors are her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Charles T. Kearns, of Carrabelle, Fla.; four sons, T. T. Brantley, of Johnson City, Tenn.; Guy Brantley, of Dahlonega; the Rev. Charles E. Brantley, of Dunwoody, Ga., and Frank Brantley, of Decatur, Ga.; four sisters, Mrs. T. O. Poole Sr. and Mrs. C. L. Hewey, of Decatur, and Miss Estelle Kelly and Mrs. C. T. Cobb, of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow at Kelly's chapel. Burial will be in the churchyard, with Harry G. Poole in charge.

War Job Ruling Made by Fulton

Fulton county's civil service board ruled yesterday that it would not hold open county jobs for employes, other than those who join the armed forces.

The board declared this policy in voting a year's leave of absence to Deputy Sheriff Frank Davis. It said that should he wish to re-enter the employ of the county his name would be placed on the re-employment list, but that there would be no guarantee that he would receive his old job back.

Davis requested the leave to return to a job with a railroad which gave him a leave to accept the county job. It was said that he has 32 years' seniority with the railroad.

Don't Travel Over 4th of July Unless Necessary, ODT Advises

If you don't have to travel on necessary business, stay at home during the Fourth of July weekend.

This was the advice given the public yesterday by Guy Kelcey, regional director of ODT's division of local transport, who pointed out that extra trains or buses usually operated at vacation time would not be available to accommodate holiday crowds this year.

Kelcey emphasized that overcrowding of trains and inter-city buses by holiday pleasure-seekers would interfere both with furlough travel by members of the armed forces and with essential civilian passenger travel.

He warned, too, that persons who ignored the advice of the ODT to stay at home might find themselves temporarily stranded and unable to return at the time planned.

Pointing out that rail and bus service will be substantially the same as on normal week-end and that furlough travel is the heaviest at week-ends, Kelcey said "the railroads and bus lines cannot handle large crowds of holiday pleasure-seekers in addition to members of the armed forces and civilians traveling on essential business."

"The patriotic thing to do is to spend the Fourth of July week-end at home," he added.

Ryan Will Makes 4 Public Bequests

Four public bequests were contained in the will of Robert A. Ryan, real estate man who died last Thursday, filed for probate yesterday with Ordinary Thomas H. Jeffries. Ryan left $2,000 to St. Joseph's infirmary, $1,000 to the Home for Incurables, $1,000 to the Crippled Children's Home and $1,000 to the St. Vincent de Paul Society of Sacred Heart church.

James E. Farrell Dies; Rites Today

James E. Farrell, of 124 Eleventh street, N. E., died Tuesday at the residence.

Survivors include his wife; three daughters, Mrs. S. Duncan Peeples, Mrs. H. C. Widenhorn, of Arlington, N. J., and Mrs. Hubert W. Hofer, of Columbia, S. C., and a brother, D. A. Farrell.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. today at Sacred Heart church, with the Rev. Father William J. Lonergan officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery. Funeral arrangements will be in charge of H. M. Patterson & Son.

City's Pinball Law Will Be Tested Today

Jimmy Vickers Slated for Trial on Two Separate Charges.

The city ordinance barring operation of pinball machines in Atlanta, which was passed by city council in 1939, faces a test today in two courts—the federal district court over which Judge Marvin Underwood presides, and the recorder's court of Atlanta, Judge A. W. Callaway's division.

Jimmie Vickers, former mayoralty candidate, is slated for trial before Callaway on two separate charges of violating the ordinance at the 2:30 p. m. session of the court today, and Forrest Raymond Phillips, of Columbia, S. C., is seeking to test the constitutionality of the ordinance in Underwood's court, charging that Vickers has threatened to cease use of the Phillips machine.

Former Governor Talmadge and Young Fraser represent Phillips and Vickers.

Vickers operates a grill at 134 North avenue, N. W., where he is accused of violating the ordinance.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 1, 1943.

Logical Reaction

Report by the Institute of Public Opinion, better known as the Gallup Poll, that a majority of the men in the service, both at home and abroad, are Democrats reveals, after all, nothing but logical reaction by the men in the fighting forces to the actions of congress and some other leaders on the home front.

The truth is that rivalries, arguments and policy conflicts at home have caused some men in the services to fear the home front is not backing up the battlefront with that unity which is essential to victory in modern war. The President is their commander-in-chief and anything which threatens his direction of the war, or of America's part in it, appears to them as a direct blow against them and in favor of the enemy.

It cannot be gainsaid there has been too much criticism of vital national policies in wartime. Undoubtedly some of the congressional critics of such policies have been actuated by sincere belief that the policies in question are detrimental to the nation's fighting strength. No one can impugn the loyalty or the motives of critics who are honestly convinced that changes in certain policies, or certain leadership, would increase the national ability to wage effective war.

However, it is equally true that much of the criticism on the floor of both houses stems from political causes alone. This is the type of criticism which has no constructive purpose, but seeks only to discredit the administration because there is an election looming for 1944. It is directed by men who, apparently, are more interested in political advantage, in the battles of party politics, than they are in the war against enemies who would crush the United States into the status of slavery if we do not utterly defeat them in battle.

It is tragic that such men should be able to sabotage national unity and thus weaken the nation at such a time as this.

The men in the service know that most of such politically inspired sabotage comes from the Republican party. They are, rightfully, disgusted at this intrusion of party and factional disruption when the whole nation should be a single force for victory, united and unswerving behind the nation's commander-in-chief.

It is, therefore, but natural that the soldier vote should be predominantly Democratic. For it is, in their view, but a question of upholding the hands of their commander, or betraying him to those who place party or selfish objectives ahead of the national safety.

How big a proportion of the men in service will take advantage of the law which provides for their absentee votes in the 1944 election cannot be foretold. In the congressional elections of last year only a small proportion sent in their ballots. That, however, can provide no clue to the percentage who will vote in a presidential election.

It is quite possible the voters in uniform will prove the decisive factor, both in 1944 and in elections of the post-war period. And, after all, who will have greater right to decide their nation's policies than the men who have faced death in war to keep her free?

Beware "Stalemate"

The statement by Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, prime minister of the Union of South Africa, that the Axis aims for a stalemate contains nothing new. Yet it is noteworthy because a warning against the kind of thinking that could make such a stalemate a reality cannot be reiterated too often.

The Germans have passed their zenith and are on the downgrade. As Smuts said, the Nazi and Fascist leaders are desperate men who will drive their people to fight with despair and courage before the final knockout is achieved. That, too, is a statement of truth difficult to deny.

A stalemate would be a victory for the Germans, and they will fight for that. It would give them a breathing space to prepare for renewal of the struggle for domination at a later time. Thus total victory, and that alone, must be achieved. Nothing less will do.

An Unwarranted Slander

Louie D. Newton, in his column, "Good Morning," today expresses proper resentment at an utterly unwarranted slur against the ministers of the south, which is found in an article by Walter Davenport in last week's issue of Collier's magazine.

Davenport's charge of venality against southern ministers is general. It makes no mention of names nor of denomination. It simply lumps all southern ministers in one group and declares "many of Dixie's clergymen" have sold their influence and their freedom of opinion down the river for a mess of political bribery.

The direct charge is made that "one of the most important of America's industrial organizations . . . have large sums of money to spend, and its missionaries are open-handed with it. As a result, many of Dixie's clergymen, politically more powerfully than their ministerial brethren in the north, are now gently but firmly deploring the possibility of a fourth term for Mr. Roosevelt. . . . This preacher persuasion is not flowing direct from the pulpit but rather from the clergy in its more intimate man-to-man contacts."

Anyone with even cursory acquaintance with a cross-section of the southern clergy, of all denominations, knows such a charge is false. The clergyman who would use his influence, even though dictated solely by honest belief, in political controversy, is a rarity. He who would so far disgrace his cloth by accepting money to exert political pressure is practically non-existent. Certainly, if such do exist, they are unfit for the high calling they profess.

Davenport's entire article about southern political views of today is filled with misstatements and erroneous conclusions arrived at by one who evidently sought only biased views and, seeking them, listened only to the few who constitute a vocal, but false fringe on the solid mass of southern opinion.

As to his baseless calumny of southern ministers of the church, there is only one decent course open to Davenport or the magazine which published it. That course is public retraction and abject apology.

Linton Cooke Hopkins Sr.

The death of Linton C. Hopkins Sr. removes from the Atlanta scene a man whose career has been one fraught with accomplishment and culture. Prominent attorney, author and court official, Mr. Hopkins was, possibly, favorably known to as many Atlantans as any citizen in many years.

He was notable in his profession for his wide knowledge of the law. He was equally notable in his secondary pursuit, that of literature. He had written numerous successful short stories as well as two mystery books, "Black Buck" and "The Candle."

He was always active in civic affairs and at one time was president of the Associated Charities. He was one of the organizers of the Sheltering Arms Society and was a president of the Family Welfare Society. He had also served as chairman of the board of the Atlanta Carnegie Library.

As a real estate pioneer he developed the Habersham road and Chatham road sections of north Atlanta.

But, amidst all his interests and activities, his varied services to the city of which he was a native and which he loved, there is one phase of his character which, in all probability, is the first thing thought of as friends today learn of his death. That was his invariable exemplification of a truly courteous gentleman.

Georgia Editors Say:

LIMITATION OF PARDONS.
(From The Albany Herald.)

There has been considerable discussion among the newspapers of Georgia as to the wisdom and the propriety of the State Parole Board's recent announcement that it will issue no pardons except in cases where there is conclusive evidence that the prisoner was innocent of the charge on which he was convicted.

Most of the comment which has come to our attention has been more or less qualified in its approval of that decision. It has been pointed out that while in the great majority of cases such a policy would prove wise, there might be times when even a convicted man could with justice be granted a pardon.

However, in view of the fact that the decision deals with pardons only, and not with paroles, it seems that there could hardly be many cases in which an exception to the new rule might be given consideration. There are many cases in which paroles of convicted men are justified, but very few in which outright pardons should be granted.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

AMAZING BLINDNESS WASHINGTON, June 30.—After considering the cost and devastation of modern warfare, not to mention the attending misery and waste of human lives, it is inconceivable that there should be any dissent to the question of organizing an international police force for maintaining world peace after the present conflict is over.

Two disastrous world wars within a single generation should be enough to convince the most confirmed skeptic on the need for such a force.

Every thoughtful person should have learned by now, it seems, that great nations, like great cities, cannot be relied upon to maintain the peace without the application of a strong police force to command law and order.

And yet in the face of the lessons we have learned, or should have learned, the country is treated to the amazing spectacle of two United States senators—Wheeler, of Montana, and Nye, of North Dakota—challenging the need for an international peace force after the war.

These two former isolationists have revealed their true colors by making it known that any such plans for the enforcement of world peace after the war will meet with their bitter opposition.

In lieu of the proposed world police force, the two benighted senators would maintain the peace of the world by removing the causes of war.

APPEAL TO MORONS Now, that is a pretty phrase that has a certain appeal to morons and pacifist element. But it is about as nonsensical as the thesis which Senator Nye set out to establish in connection with his munitions investigation of a few years ago that all wars are started by the international bankers and munitions makers, bent on profit.

Let's see how the Nye-Wheeler formula for avoiding war would have worked in the case of Japan, for example. The cause of the Pacific war can be written in one word—greed. Japan, after carving huge slices off China and Korea, coveted the rich possessions of the British and the Dutch in the South Pacific. She likewise looked with eager eyes on the Philippines.

Neither the United States nor Britain had committed any act detrimental to Japan, beyond expressing a normal indignation over her deeds of aggression against China.

SHEER COVETOUSNESS The cause of the war in the Pacific, therefore, was nothing but sheer covetousness. Other nations had territory the Japs wanted in their lust for empire. All that was necessary to avoid war was to give the Japs Singapore, Malaya, the Dutch East Indies, the Philippines, and perhaps New Zealand and Australia. At such a price peace could have been purchased.

The same lust for power and greed started the European war. Hitler was provoked only to a minor degree by the injustices of the Versailles Treaty. He was not interested nearly so much in correcting those injustices as he was in setting Germany up as the dominant military power of Europe. More than this, he wanted to impose German rule on the entire world, or so much of it as suited his purpose.

In the light of all the efforts that were made to appease him, can anyone now doubt that the granting of every demand made by Hitler would have forestalled war?

The final proof that it would not is found in the Russian invasion. No aspect of the Versailles Treaty was involved in that act of aggression. Russia had no territory that had been yielded by Germany. Hitler was merely bent on removing the last challenge to his authority on the continent.

ASININE DREAMERS Yet, in the face of these facts, Wheeler and Nye have the unmitigated gall to propose such an asinine thesis. It is a blot on the intelligence of the American congress that two such crackbrains should be allowed a seat in that assembly.

The attitude of Wheeler and Nye is evidence enough that the old isolationist element of congress is not dead, but dormant. They are only waiting for an opportune time to raise their heads. Once the war is over and the restraints that now hold them back are removed, they may be expected to oppose every forward-looking proposal that is made for the orderly enforcement of world peace.

So long as they remain in public office they will be the scavengers of progress in world affairs, the carpers and the critics who will try to scuttle every decent program for making the world a more peaceful place in which to live.

THEY ARE DANGEROUS The danger in the situation is that too many Americans, because of our remoteness from the actual scenes of battle, may be taken in by a revival of the old isolationist talk. None of our cities have yet been bombed. We are yet to taste the real horrors of war. If a few of our cities were destroyed by bombs, we would probably have a better conception of the true instincts of those who would try to prevent bloody holocausts of the kind.

But if American cities escape bombings in the present war there is no assurance the next conflict will leave our people free of these horrors. The progress being made in the science of aviation makes it absolutely certain that within a few years no country, however isolated, will be immune to air raids.

CHEAP PRICE FOR PEACE The next European war after this one—if there is permitted to be a next one—will find American cities a part of the front lines, just as British and German cities are today. The thought of that alone should be enough to make every one of us determined to do everything possible to put an end for all time to the extravagance and waste of wars.

An international police force, made up and supported by the peace-loving nations of the world, would be a cheap price to pay for peace. That anyone should oppose such a scheme is beyond intelligent comprehension.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

"Blackout" Silhouette.

See that G. M. (Pup) Phillips, director of civilian defense for the Atlanta area, was well pleased with the work of his air raid wardens during the surprise blackout which occurred on Tuesday night. Ninety-nine per cent perfect, he called it.

Here's the story of what happened in one warden's territory, just so Director Phillips will understand one reason why the blackout was so good.

One block warden was not at home. He was, in fact, a dozen miles or more away, on business.

In said warden's home, however, a party was in progress. Warden's daughter and a girl friend were hostesses at a party honoring a soon-to-be bride. There were 16 or 18 girls present. Four tables of bridge and, if reports are correct, the hostesses didn't play. Devoted themselves to the job of hostessing and, in so far as the bridge playing went, were nothing but spares.

In the middle of the party, the telephone rang. Daughter of the house answered. It was advance warning that the raid signals would sound in about 10 minutes.

"But," explained the girl, "Daddy isn't here. He's away on business."

"Well," responded the voice on the phone, "you'll have to act as warden in his place."

The girl protested, told of the party in progress. To no avail. The order was specific. Instructions as to donning daddy's helmet and raincoat, finding a flashlight, and so on, followed.

Must Have Been A Picture.

Now the girl in this case is on the smallish order. Her father is the contrary.

But she obeyed orders.

The warden's helmet sank down over her ears. The raincoat had to be pinned up to keep it from dragging. In the rain, the girl didn't want to damage a good pair of shoes—remember, they're rationed? So she wore a pair of house slippers which were already wet.

Found the flashlight and, when the first signal came, stepped out bravely in the rain to do the job. With the voices of all her guests lending encouragement and some withering comment on her appearance.

Whenever she saw a light she blew her whistle in true warden style, in that "I must be obeyed" tone that is so effective. She marched up and down the block just as dad would have done had he been there.

She had practically no trouble with recalcitrant householders, though one would-be humorist told her to stay away from a certain house, even though lights were burning, "because there's the body of a woman whose been dead a couple of days there and so its a special case."

Of course, such childish trivia did not deter her from her duty.

Ice Cream Complication.

To complicate matters, there was a supply of ice cream for the party, bought and paid for, but left at the drug store to be called for, so it would be in perfect condition for the party.

Immediately after the all-clear was sounded, the young lady ran to her family's automobile to go and get that cream. The would-be humorist again poked his weak ideas of fun into the picture, by telling her it was a trick blackout, that another warning signal would follow in a few minutes.

But lights were going on all over the place so she ignored this and drove to the drug store. It was closed and dark. She pounded desperately on the door and, at last, a clerk opened it a crack to inform her the place was closed for the night. But she got a toe inside so the door couldn't close while she explained about the ice cream—bought and paid for—that was inside. She got it and the party was saved.

In fact, most of the girls said the blackout and the frantic efforts to help the hostess don the wardening costume and so forth, added to the excitement and interest.

And, they all agreed, the most exciting moment of all was when, peering from the darkened windows of the house, they saw Peggy stand determinedly in the center of the street car track, waving the flashlight to make a lighted, moving street car stop. The motorman stopped, explained he intended only to go as far as the next designated stopping place, where he would wait for the all clear.

But, Pup, I thought you'd be interested in this true little story of a bit of so-excellent wardening done on Tuesday night. How about an official citation of award for the young lady? I'll give you her name and address if you want 'em.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Congress Authority NEW YORK, June 30.—Although recent actions of congress have been described as a rebellion of the legislature against the executive, and not to minimize the danger of a deadlock between them, the position of congress is misrepresented in this estimate. Congress has not rebelled but has merely reasserted its authority under the constitution and reassumed its responsibility. There should be no fight between the President and congress. There should be neither victory nor vanquished, and there will be neither unless Mr. Roosevelt insists on a conflict to a decision or a knockout instead of yielding to reasonable and peaceful adjustment.

There are those who certainly would delight to see the President humiliated and thwarted at every turn, even though this would result in still worse confusion on the home front and deferred painful effects on the fighting front. On the other side of the controversy, there are many among the President's cover-to-cover political following who would have him fight congress without the slightest compromise, even though this course, too, obviously would cause unnecessary political excitement and the same harmful results at the front.

On the record it cannot be claimed that congress has fought President Roosevelt. On the contrary, congress has consistently yielded its function and defaulted its duty. The day of the "must" legislation is not forgotten nor is it an exaggeration to say that for a long time the President did dictate to congress. Congress, on the contrary, has never dictated to the President, except in the negative sense in rejecting his court-packing program which was a cynical proposal made in a spirit of power, and in a few other rejections of proposals which amounted to commands.

New Deal For Asking When has congress dictated to President Roosevelt? He got all his New Deal laws for the asking, some of them socialistic and abruptly contrary to the customs and traditional thought of the American people. He got his Wagner Act, and it was shown later that he permitted the Labor Relations Board to be packed by the Communists who harassed and bedeviled decent Americans, who happened to be employers, in bitterly humiliating proceedings. Congress did "investigate" this persecution of reputable Americans whose sons, incidentally, are fighting now in the war, but even after the case had been proved against the board there was no gesture of amend or apology to the victims. A notorious Communist was quietly allowed to vanish from a commanding position with no explanation as to how this enemy of the American government had been selected for a position of such power in the first place.

Labor, or unionism, has been the chief concern of President Roosevelt's government on the home front since the New Deal began. Unionism has been favored above all other elements in the vast American community and to the detriment of other elements and legitimate interests, even though it has been demonstrated that the union movement is infested with bad men in positions of tremendous power. Yet, repeatedly, the President has dictated to congress, not congress to the President, when proposals were up to place responsibility on unions and their leaders or bosses. The one recent incident, which more than any other has been emphasized as an alarming rebellion by congress, was nothing more defiant than an assertion at last by congress of its right to pass a law to control a serious internal menace.

It is no remedy to say that when the President's Dutch is up, he is a stubborn fighter. He should not fight congress nor should he affect stubbornness in matters which are subject to adjustment and reason. There is nothing in the present situation that the President himself cannot cure by a change of attitude. It was exasperating but not necessarily dangerous in time of peace to place over millions of Americans, and even over congress, such men as Leon Henderson and Harry Hopkins who had never been to the polls or stood public inspection but had been selected by Mr. Roosevelt for personal qualities that antagonized the nation.

Eleanor Disquieting And Mrs. Roosevelt's associations, activities and proposals were endurable in peace but in war are seriously disquieting. Mrs. Roosevelt proposed one day that election campaigns be financed out of the public treasury and, a few days later, said the domestic scene gave one a feeling that, as a whole, the people of the United States are not really prepared for democracy.

It is too great a sacrifice to ask, for the sake of internal solidarity, that for the duration of the war Mrs. Roosevelt refrain from provocative association with controversial elements and from uttering such sentiments, considering that she partakes of the President's office and speaks' ex cathedra?

The quick passage of the Smith-Connally bill over Mr. Roosevelt's veto was actually unimportant. What happened here? Congress merely performed a congressional duty according to the method prescribed in the Constitution. The republic is in a sorry state if this incident must be taken to mean that the President is knocked out and that the American government now has no chief executive in domestic affairs, there being no challenge anywhere to his conduct of the war.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

MORE COFFEE, SUGAR, MEAT? WASHINGTON, D. C., June 29.—(By Mail)—Food? We may have so much of three now-scarce items that within the next several months the problem no longer will be keeping the ceiling price on them, but putting a floor under them.

What are those items?

Coffee, sugar, and beef, plus one or two lesser items.

This estimate comes from Georgia's senior senator, Walter F. George and it is based on information obtained by him from the Navy as to our progress in the war against the submarine.

"If we continue to do as well against the submarine in the next 100 days as we have in the last 60 days," he told me today, "there will be no submarine menace in the waters about South America or off our own southern seaboard. They will be most scarce in all the Atlantic waters near our coasts."

"What is happening that can be told?" I asked.

"Three things," he said. "One is a greatly improved listening device. Another is the fact that our planes are covering greater areas of the seas on patrol. A third is that we are producing a vast number of small craft to attack them—destroyers and smaller anti-submarine boats.

"The last 60 days have seen enormous improvement in the submarine situation. If it continues across another 60 or 100 days at the same rate, the problem will have been wiped out in so far as our own waters are concerned and will have become a minor problem in others."

(That is real news. And good news. It means not merely more food, but it means an earlier victory.)

MORE SHIPS "That will mean," said Senator George, "that we will be able to use some of the ships, without convoy, to bring in sugar from Cuba and Puerto Rico, coffee from South America, and, if we have to, beef from the Argentine.

"There is plenty of beef in America. It is the price which the cattlemen object to. They are holding their beef on the ranges and pastures. If there should be a move to bring in beef from the Argentine, so that the country could have plenty of beef at reasonable prices, the cattlemen would put their own beef on the market.

"As for the other two items, there would be more than enough coffee and sugar and we would have the problem of putting floors under it to prevent the market from going to pieces."

Senator George remains one of the most influential men in the nation's congress. He has a tremendous following, not merely in congress, but out.

Some of his friends say that he is more appreciated by the people of other states than his own, but I do not agree. They point to the fact that in other states there has developed movements to campaign for Senator George as the vice president on the Democratic ticket next year. Some few have suggested him as the possible nominee.

Georgia appreciates him fully as much and would support him should he indicate a desire for any such position. Not having done so, Georgia apparently plans to re-elect him to the United States senate for another six years when the time comes in 1944. There is a growing sentiment over the state to reward Senator George with an unopposed nomination. Should some person choose to oppose him, I am sure Georgia would demonstrate that the choosing was unwise.

Even those who think Senator George is too conservative believe him sincere. Even those who call him a reactionary concede that he is honest in his attitudes.

It all adds up, I think, to the fact that Georgia appreciates him fully as much, and more, than any other state. We are polite in Georgia. We don't start trying to run a man for something he hasn't said he wanted.

BY COMPROMISE It is not generally appreciated by our idealists (and I do not mean to deprecate idealists) that government in any representative form of government is government by compromise.

That is why me must always have the politician if we are to have our form of government. When the two extremes clash head-on and will not budge, the experienced representatives must step in and effect a compromise. If they did not, we would never have any legislation or laws.

It is not generally known, but it was Senator George whose strength and experience brought about a compromise on the tax bill. Two extremes clashed and stood head-to-head for weeks. It required enormous patience and even more enormous experience to work out a compromise. To Senator George goes most of the credit.

He is neither an extreme liberal nor an extreme conservative. He is a steady, well-informed, influential, middle-of-the-road man. They always are most valuable in time of stress.

No Force Can Hold the Front If There Are a Dozen Ways Around It

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

When Dad lays down the law that Junior shall not attend the movies again this week, that should end the matter if order and discipline are to be maintained. But Junior is smart. He thinks up a good reason why he should see the movie tonight, and takes his case to Mother. She decides in his favor, and provides money for a ticket, and that is the beginning of chaos.

Junior's scheme is known as the gentle art of by-passing authority.

When I was a kid, I was foreman of a six-man printshop, responsible for what the printers and pressmen did or did not do. Though "Mr. Mc" held me responsible, he liked to be his own foreman. When I put a printer on one job, "Mr. Mc" put him on another. He told me to put up a no-smoking sign; and when the printers complained he told them to go ahead and smoke. After a few weeks of this, anybody who wished to argue about an order simply went over my head to "Mr. Mc"—and usually talked him into a change, for he was a natural appeaser.

I stood it for two months and quit. It isn't fun to be responsible for output if your authority won't stick.

By-passing, more than anything else, has made Washington a madhouse.

Many boards, bureaus and individuals have been appointed to help manage our war effort, but not one has ever been given complete and final authority to do its job.

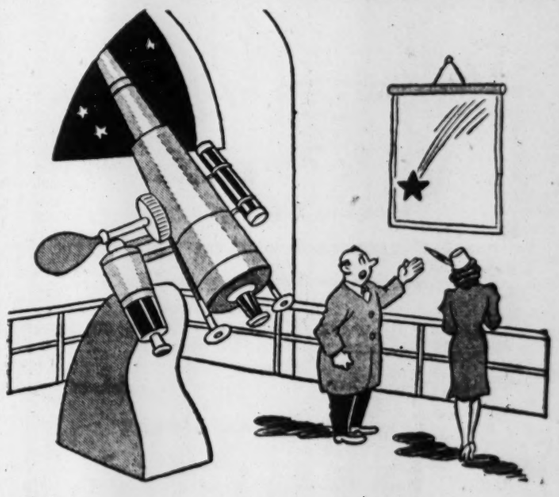

A union boss, an industrialist or an Army or Navy man doing a special job needs something of importance and goes to the right government agency to get it. If he is turned down, he doesn't quit. He goes to some other agency. If all agencies turn him down, he goes to the President—and often gets what he wants. In short, nobody on the job can say yes or no with assurance that it will stick.

When Mr. Baruch was appointed assistant to Mr. Byrnes, he said he assumed that by-passing would be ended. He probably meant that he had been given assurance that there would be no more by-passing.

But a man cannot easily change his natural tendencies or long-established habits, and it is too early to begin cheering.

The idea is right. Byrnes and Baruch are the right men. But whether they clean up the muddles and messes that now delay victory will depend upon whether they have the authority to make decisions that nobody can unstick.

Wheatless and meatless and fruitless and milkless
Butterless, lardless, and gasless and silkless—
These are the days which we mortals must think about
These are the things we resolve we will do without.
Then, there are weeks we are thoroughly appled
And filled with the fruit that is rosy and dappled.
Weeks to be good to the poor suffering animals.
Weeks to think kindly of man-eating cannibals—
Weeks to write letters to mothers-in-law—
Days to give presents to mother and paw—
Weeks to buy jags for some worthy foundation.
To save all the alley cats in our great nation.
Days to turn sinners from pathways of sin
Who pickle their bodies in bourbon or gin.
Oh, give us one day in which we may relax
A day that is free from some burden of tax!

OLLIE REEVES.

Not Foolhardy

A friend in the clothing business—representing a national chain, caught me on the sidewalk and beckoned me inside his store and into his back room.

"Just between us," he said, after seeing the door was closed, "I have here a zoot suit—complete with drape shape, tight cuffs, flat hat with feather and everything. And a six-foot brass watch chain. Without the watch."

"So what?" I inquired, coining an expression on the spur of the moment.

"Our company," he said, "had an idea it would make a good window display. Of course, that was before the Los Angeles incident when it was shipped."

"So what?" I insisted, always original.

"You're always looking for a good story," he explained. He used to be press agent for Durando's Trained Seals, as he had confessed some time previously. "So why not put on this zoot suit and its accompaniments and take a stroll on Peachtree. You'd get a lot of reaction."

After due consideration, while lighting a cigaret, I said I'd rather put on a Union Army uniform with a makeup closely resembling General Sherman's or even a Jap outfit—if he could fix my eyes with a pair of thick glasses and a set of Teddy Roosevelt teeth. My accident insurance doesn't cover anything beyond being struck by a baby blue automobile between 4 and 6 p. m. except on Sundays and holidays with a driver who has paid up his license fee and was the traffic light red or green?

"What is there in it for me?" I inquired.

"Oh, we'll be liberal," my friend returned. "You can keep the zoot suit, or its remains."

"But what about hospital bills?" I insisted, being cautious that way.

"Surely you carry hospitalization insurance," he said. "All sensible men do."

"Of course," I agreed. "But it doesn't cover temporary insanity or palpable attempts at suicide. I'll send you over a fine young chap who hangs around our shop. He just loves publicity."

"If he wears this zoot suit between here and the Grady monument," said my always-thinking 'em-up friend, "he'll get it. And I'll send a wreath to his funeral."

Dangerous Spots

Egan Echoes, of which Paul P. Reese is ed. and pub., came in the mail just in time to provide a few gags. Indeed, all its four pages are full of gags, a few fairly new.

But I was especially interested in two little stories Paul tells as true . . . all related to embarrassing situations among his acquaintances.

One chap, Jimmy, was flagged down by a young woman who said her mother was dying, right on the front porch, and would Jimmy help rush her to the hospital? Which Jimmy did, taking the daughter along. When they reached the hospital the old lady was dead and the hospital refused to admit a corpse. In the meantime the daughter passed out cold and was taken in for treatment. And there was Jimmy, with a dead passenger in his car. He didn't know her name and hadn't noticed the address where he picked her up. So he just sat there for two hours while passers-by looked at him—and the corpse—curiously. And then the girl recovered and called up her brother . . . and everything was cleared up.

But that was nothing compared to Charley's trouble. Charley took a business trip to Cincinnati, registered at a hotel, slept there, finished his business, checked out and came home.

Next day a Cincinnati cop showed up, armed with extradition papers. It seemed Charley was wanted in Cleveland for a slight case of murder. So he went back to Cleveland to stand trial and find out whom he'd murdered.

It turned out that when Charley checked out he forgot to lock his hotel room. A disconsolate dame with a hangover wandered into his room, swallowed a dose of poison and looked like a candidate for the morgue.

That looked tough for Charley. A dying woman found in the room he'd just left! No identification.

Fortunately . . . for Charley; at least . . . the woman in the case recovered and explained all.

If she hadn't got well . . . that would have been a tough spot for Charley. No cop on earth would have believed his story.

"How many know," inquires a spot news story sent out by a syndicate, "that Puerto Rico is a territory of our United States represented in congress by Honorable Bolivar Pagan?"

In answer to which I'd reply: "Very few."

COUNT OUR BLESSINGS.

Editor, Constitution: Being president of these United States and having the high responsibility of being commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy and, at the same time, looking after our economic fronts, keeping in mind that we have pressure groups from all sides, is not an easy job.

As a people, let's not flatter ourselves that we individually are cooperating with our President, nor are we backing our government whole-heartedly. As a matter of fact, all too many of us seem to forget that we are at war, fighting for our very existence, and all too many of us are trying to improve our lots during a war of destruction.

Now is the time to stand squarely behind our commander-in-chief and to do everything we can to help him surmount the difficulties that beset him.

So far we have performed miracles, and it has been a stupendous task in itself to prevent serious inflation, which we have up to this time.

It might be well to count our blessings. ARMAND MAY.

Atlanta.

LAW ON FIREARMS.

Editor, Constitution: It is regrettable to note that the Atlanta police authorities are following the usual American pattern, in that when they have failed to properly enforce the laws, they already have, they endeavor to cover up their deficiencies by requesting the enactment of a new law. This would seem to be the case in the present demand for the registration of all firearms in the city, regardless of the Bill of Rights or the dictates of common sense. This type of law is worthless, as is the infamous Sullivan Act of New York state, for the simple reason the honest man will register his guns and run the risk of their seizure by some arbitrary police official, while the crook will go merrily upon his way, armed to the teeth. Laws of this class have repeatedly been urged upon the country as a whole by some fatheaded government officials, but congress has always turned them down, and it is to be hoped that Atlanta's city government will do likewise.

Wartime Term Begins at Emory

Emory University's first term under the new war time schedule will begin at 9 a. m. today when registration of civilian students will be held in the library building.

However, civilian students who registered and were assigned to classes at the end of the spring quarter need not report until 8 a. m. Tuesday, July 6, when the first regular classes will be held, Registrar J. G. Stipe announced yesterday.

Approximately 900 men in Army, Navy and Marine uniforms also are being registered at Emory this week for regular university courses under the new college training plan of the military services for prospective officers.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D NEWTON

DAVENPORT'S "DIG."

Walter Davenport, political writer on Collier's staff, has an article in the current issue of this interesting weekly magazine, issue of July 3, on "Fourth - Term Frost in Dixie." I resist the temptation to comment generally on the article, remembering that a preacher must, in so far as in him lies, avoid political issues. I often find myself wishing that I might let go in that field; but there are others far better qualified to write on politics, and so I try to stick to my knitting.

But there is one paragraph in Brother Davenport's article that I will not let pass without a protest. The paragraph appears on page 59 of the July 3rd issue of Collier's. I quote:

"One of the most important of America's industrial organizations (identity a political secret) has its missionaries working the entire sector. It has large sums of money to spend and its missionaries are open-handed with it. As a result, many of Dixie's clergymen, politically more powerful than their ministerial brethren in the north, are now gently but firmly deploring the possibility of a fourth term for Mr. Roosevelt, viewing with alarm the increasing threats to individual enterprise and the growing tendency toward governmental control of industry. This preacher persuasion is not flowing direct from the pulpit but rather from the clergy in its more intimate man-to-man contacts."

If I understand ordinary language, Mr. Davenport is here accusing every preacher in the south of venality. He says there are "many of Dixie's clergymen" involved in this business of being "missionaries" for an industrial organization that "has large sums of money to spend and its missionaries are open-handed with it." Until he names his men, he has implied that we are all guilty. By the cowardly method of implication, he has sought to leave the impression on his readers that southern preachers are for sale for any sort of dirty business that any man or group with sufficient money may desire of them.

I wrote Charles Colebaugh, editor of Collier's, under date of June 29, asking him to publish the name of even one venal southern minister, and expressing the hope that he would exhibit the ordinary courtesy of ethical journalism by producing not only the names but the evidence of guilt in each case. I sent copies of my letter to Mr. Colebaugh, to Mr. Davenport and Mr. Chenery, publisher of Collier's. I await their replies with interest.

There is no perfect man on this earth. The best of men are only men at best. We are what we are by the grace of God. As John Wesley said: "I am a sinner saved by grace. Even so, with all our faults, preachers will not remain silent when some transient scandal-monger ruthlessly implies that we are all a bunch of venal crooks, ready to do the dirty work of any racketeer that happens to have a fat roll. At least here is one preacher that will not remain silent under such implications. Either Mr. Davenport should name his men or be sport enough to admit that he bought he could smear the preachers of the south and get away with it. You have the floor, Mr. Davenport!

Inside Slant on Pen Etiquette

"A confidence man with more than one year in on his sentence takes precedence over a defaulting cashier with less than five years served; a counterfeiter with more than five years to go takes precedence over both: a Dyer Act chauffeur (no matter how much time in or yet to go) always sits at the end of the table—moonshiners eat in the kitchen."

This bit of prison protocol is to be found in the May-June issue of "The Atlantian," the magazine published by inmates of the Atlanta federal penitentiary under the title, "You Are a Cad, Sir!"

The author, sub-titles his prison Emily Post article—"Or a few simple suggestions on how to avoid becoming a big-house bounder."

"Table manners is the correct method for getting the cooked groceries onto the assembly line with the minimum of wastage, embarrassment, and bloodshed," the author explains, "and the maximum of grace, dispatch, poetry of motion and elan. For elan is another way of saying verve and verve is that certain soupcon of je-ne-sais-quoi and if you are still trying to fog us into a better definition of elan an article on etiquette won't do you any good and to hell with you, and you might as well stop reading right here."

Three Guises.

"Big-house bounders" usually appear in three guises this paragon of penal politeness continues—"the Junior Birdman, who has a wingspread like a B-19 and who conducts all dining room operations at the lateral-elbow stance; the are-you-gonna-eat-that-cake gent, who operates on a sort of nonmutual lend-lease policy, and the combination coffee-and-soup cooler, who lowers the temperature of all fluids by puddling them in the depression of his tray and blowing upon them, gently but firmly."

To get away from these characters, the author advises that one should casually drop some simple remark like "Funny, how much better my smallpox is today," or "If I should have one of my fits just put a clothespin in my mouth so that I don't bite my tongue off."

The author closes his table manners remarks with: "Don't, be tempted to spear tasty morsels off your neighbor's tray unless you are sure you can get along in life with only one hand," and "It is not considered good form to burp during the meal: burp only afterwards, and then in a modulated, well-bred tone, not directed at anyone in particular."

Fashions.

As to clothes—"The discriminating inmate will also want to know how to be correctly garbed for all occasions. He will, of course, eschew loud patterns and textures. For most informal occasions a quiet shade of gray is popular with the fastidious and is generally worn in a two-piece effect of chemise and pantalons; jewelry and accessories are not considered de rigeur with this apparel though, occasionally, those whose tastes are fanciful (and whose aim is bad) will offset the conservatism of their one-tone shirting with garnishments of soup, gravy, and—when available—coffee. Cocoa stains are not considered chic, this season.

"Evening wear is very much the same as daytime wear with the exception that after 10 o'clock, many inmates prefer to appear en decollete—right down to their feet, some of them. On Saturday mornings (in the shower room) the most popular costume is the "epidermis ensemble" sometimes known as "the altogether."

The author closes with the parenthesized promise to discuss next month "Small Talk, Polite Conversation, How To Write Letters, and The Care and Feeding of the Faux Pas."

Cocky Britons Remove Emergency Defenses

LONDON, June 30.—(AP)—Great Britain is removing many of her emergency defenses, such as anti-tank ditches, barbed-wire barriers and road obstructions, hastily thrown up when invasion seemed imminent in 1940.

Pay-as-You-Go Income Taxes Reality for 44,000,000 Today

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP) Pay-as-you-earn income taxes become a reality tomorrow for some 44,000,000 Americans.

For the first time since the government began taking a bite out of incomes 30 years ago, a current collection system based on a 20 per cent withholding levy above personal exemptions goes into effect with the start of the new fiscal year. The first actual cut comes out of pay for the first pay roll period beginning in July. For persons paid on a calendar week basis that period begins Sunday, July 4.

The plan wipes out an estimated $6,533,000,000 in present tax liabilities, yet the Treasury expects it to yield $3,600,000,000 more in the fiscal year 1944 and $1,094,000,000 more in 1945 than the present law.

Hence, although on paper from 75 to 100 per cent of each taxpayer's debt to the government was canceled, actually the highly disputed "forgiveness" will not save him any money currently.

If his 1942 tax bill was $50 or less and his income unchanged, he will pay the same amount he would have paid under the existing law. But if he owed the government more than $50 he must pay all that he would have paid anyway, plus the unabated portion of that debt, which will fall due in equal instalments next March 15 and March 15, 1945.

The 20 per cent withholding levy, which applies above exemptions of $624 a year for a single person, $1,248 a year for a married person and $312 a year for each dependent, is intended to cover only the six per cent normal and 13 per cent first bracket surtax plus the three per cent net victory tax. As a result single persons earning more than $2,700 a year and married persons whose income exceeds $3,500—those who fall into the second and higher surtax brackets—will have an additional tax liability, to be estimated and paid in four equal instalments.

Those taxpayers will file their first estimates of anticipated income this September 15. At that time they will pay any tax due above pay roll deductions and make another payment on December 15. If their income changes during that time, they also will file another estimate. On March 15 after this first, transition year, they and all other taxpayers must file a final annual return on March 15 just as in the past.

Theaters Present Topnotch Bills Not Matched in Many a Day

'They Got Me Covered,' 'Stage Door Canteen,' 'Dixie' Open.

Atlanta theater fans have hit the proverbial "jack pot" this week, for there is offered on the screens of local amusement houses an array of talent, gags, gals and laughter which hasn't been matched in many a day.

"Stage Door Canteen," featuring a cast of more than half a hundred of the entertainment world's greatest has it local premier at the Grand today, while the Fox will entertain crowds with "Dixie," a tuneful story of the old south with Bing Crosby and Dorothy Lamour in the leads; "They Got Me Covered" Samuel Goldwyn's new comedy riot, with Hope and Lamour cracking the jokes plays its first engagement at the Rialto today and the Paramount holds for another week "Coney Island."

On the stage of the Roxy theater Dan Fitch has cooked up another of his entertaining stage shows, this time starring Gus Van, noted Ziegfeld comedian.

Here they are, take your pick:

Loew's Grand

"Stage Door Canteen," a behind-the-scenes story of what goes on in this famous entertainment spot for soldiers, with more than 50 big stars in the cast, opens on the screen of Loew's Grand today.

Several of the nation's top bands, those of Benny Goodman, Guy Lombardo, Kay Kyser, Xavier Cugart and Count Basie are featured in the musical numbers, while dozens of famous Broadway and Hollywood comedians and actors are seen in skits adapted to their respective talents.

The story is woven around the romances of three soldiers and their "dates" at the canteen. Cheryl Walker and William Terry, two unknowns, handle the lead romantic parts.

HOPE AT RIALTO—Bob Hope, star of radio and screen, will be seen starting today at the Rialto theater in "They Got Me Covered." Dorothy Lamour plays the feminine lead.

Fox

Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour and Marjorie Reynolds are teamed in the feature attraction starting at the Fox tomorrow—"Dixie," a story based on the life of Dan Emmett, famous minstrel man.

Set against the background of the old colonial south, "Dixie" gives Bing a chance to express his talents for singing the oldies such as "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Last Rose of Summer" and "Old Dan Tucker" as well as several new minstrel numbers.

Rialto

"They Got Me Covered," a riotous comedy with Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour accounting for most of the laughs bows in on the screen of the Rialto today for an unlimited engagement.

In this film, produced by Samuel Goldwyn, Hope is seen as a foreign correspondent who muffs the Nazi invasion of Russia. He is recalled to Washington where he (and Miss Lamour) become involved in an enemy spy scheme.

Roxy

Dan Fitch, famous minstrel producer who now is turning out shows for the Roxy theater, brings another "name" attraction into this theater tomorrow when he introduces to Atlanta audiences Gus Van, former Ziegfeld star. Van, a vocalist, is said to possess a quality of voice which rarely has been imitated.

Several other specialty numbers have been booked by Fitch to go with this show and the lovely Fitch chorus will be featured in several new production numbers.

Paramount

"Coney Island," 20th Century Fox's lavish musicale, starring Betty Grable, George Montgomery and Cesar Romero will play another week at the Paramount theater beginning tomorrow.

Filmed against the colorful background of the famous New York resort, "Coney Island" offers a wealth of music, dancing and comedy.

Federal Court Drops Stewart, Huiet Cases

Cases pending in federal court against Ben T. Huiet, state labor commissioner, and two former associates, J. E. B. Stewart and Marion A. O'Connor, and Dr. Hiram W. Evans, former imperial wizard of the Ku-Klux Klan, and John W. Greer Jr., former state purchasing agent, were nol-prossed yesterday on motion of United States District Attorney M. Neil Andrews.

District Attorney Andrews appeared before Judge E. Marvin Underwood with motions to nol-pros the cases in the first step toward "cleaning out the federal closet of old and pending cases." Judge Underwood ordered the motions granted.

Commissioner Huiet, Stewart and O'Connor were charged with conspiracy to violate the federal corrupt practices act which prohibits the receiving and solicitation of funds from employes receiving salaries from the United States Treasury for purposes of conducting campaigns for re-election. The three were tried on these charges in a case which ended in a mistrial on November 7, 1942.

Dr. Evans, Greer and three companies — American Bitumuls Co., Shell Oil Co., Inc. and Emulsified Asphalt Refining Co. were charged with violation of the Sherman antitrust act. Evans and the three companies entered pleas of nolo contendere in federal court and were fined a total of $30,000 —with Evans himself being fined $15,000 and the three companies $15,000 together.

Greer was tried and convicted of the charge in federal court here and sentenced to a year in prison, however the case was carried to the court of appeals, which reversed the lower court's decision and sent it back for retrial, on June 2, 1942.

Dr. Evans and Greer were charged in another indictment with using the mails to defraud in May, 1940, however the case was never brought to trial, and this case was also nol-prossed yesterday.

Laundries Offered New WMC Rating

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP) The nation's laundries were promised aid today by the War Manpower Commission in overcoming their critical labor shortages, provided they discontinue "luxury services" and "eliminate frills."

To get special help in hiring workers, the WMC said, the laundries must do such things as:

Cease delivering damp or wet wash laundry to householders more rapidly than over a 48-hour period.

Accept but not solicit new accounts, and work with other laundries to reduce overlapping territories to a minimum by interchanging customers.

Laundries who follow a series of such standards, set up by the WMC and the War Production Board's Office of Civilian Requirements, will be eligible for classification by WMC regional directors as "locally needed" in their towns.

This designation will give them, the WMC said, "the same preferential treatment now accorded essential war industries" under WMC job-stabilization programs.

James A. Hitt, 28, proprietor of J. A. Hitt Sanitary Company, died in a private hospital early yesterday morning of injuries received a few hours earlier when his automobile skidded and crashed near Adamsville.

A companion, Tobe Wright, of a Seventeenth street address, escaped without injuries.

Hitt's survivors include his wife; two daughters, Mildred and Jane Hitt; three brothers, T. J. Hitt Jr., Abner and Albert Hitt, of the Army, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Hitt Sr.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. today at Peachtree Road Presbyterian church, with the Rev. E. T. Wilson officiating. Burial will be in West View cemetery. H. M. Patterson & Son will have charge of arrangements.

Drive Without Federal Stamp At Own Risk

Automobile owners who failed to secure the $5 federal auto stamps before the deadline yesterday may still secure the stamp. Owners who drive their automobile without displaying the stamp, however, are liable to prosecution, Marion H. Allen, collector of internal revenue, said yesterday.

Sale of stamps increased yesterday, the last day for their purchase before they go into use today, and Allen added that there would be no extension of the date the new stamp becomes valid.

Failure to obtain and display the stamps make automobile owners liable to prosecution in federal courts on a misdemeanor charge and subject to imprisonment, a fine, or both, Allen said.

Gasoline rationing is expected to cut into the number of stamps sold this year. From July 15 of last year to date, 368,529 stamps costing $5 each were bought in the state.

An empty house is more expensive than a Want Ad in The Constitution that will rent it.

That revolution down in the Argentine seems to have been a brass ring for the same old merry-go-round.

The entire thing was fun in a paper bag. It's just the old government with a shave, shine and shampoo.

Only one soldier was killed in the revolution. He probably laughed out of turn.

Reheating Home-Canned Food Urged To Eliminate Poisoning

All home canned goods, especially non-acid vegetables and meat, should be reheated before being eaten, as a safeguard against food poisoning, Dr. T. F. Sellers, of the State Health Department, said yesterday.

With so many housewives now canning foods, Dr. Sellers said precautions should be taken against the botulinus germ, cause of one of the most violent and dangerous forms of food poisoning.

The first safeguard in canning, he said, is to make sure everything is completely sterilized and then to seal the container properly. Most important, however, is reheating the food before serving. "Then the danger will be almost nil," he said.

He cautioned that "any bulging at the ends of a can should be regarded with suspicion," explaining this indicates gas produced by growth of organisms.

Botulism has been rare in Georgia, Dr. Sellers said, apparently because of soil conditions in the state. But he warned that the germ is resistant to heat and for that reason is always a potential danger, especially in a time of so much home canning.

Dr. Sellers said he had "anticipated trouble" from food poisoning this summer because of "demoralized conditions" in the handling and preparation of food, but he declared that so far there has been practically none.

"The situation is much better than it was last year, but this is no reason to take any chances," he said, adding that cleanliness and refrigeration are basic to preventing food poisoning. He also recommended the reheating of any leftover foods before eating unless they have been well refrigerated.

ODT Imposes 3 P. M. Curfew On Truck Lines

Action Expected To Save Wasted Mileage in Georgia.

A 3 p. m. curfew imposed by the Office of Defense Transportation on for-hire trucks is expected to save much mileage among the thousands of Atlanta and Georgia trucking firms, it was said yesterday.

The ODT placed a curfew on orders for freight pickup, or requests for delivery, stating they must be received by the truck operator before 3 p. m. to be handled in the same day.

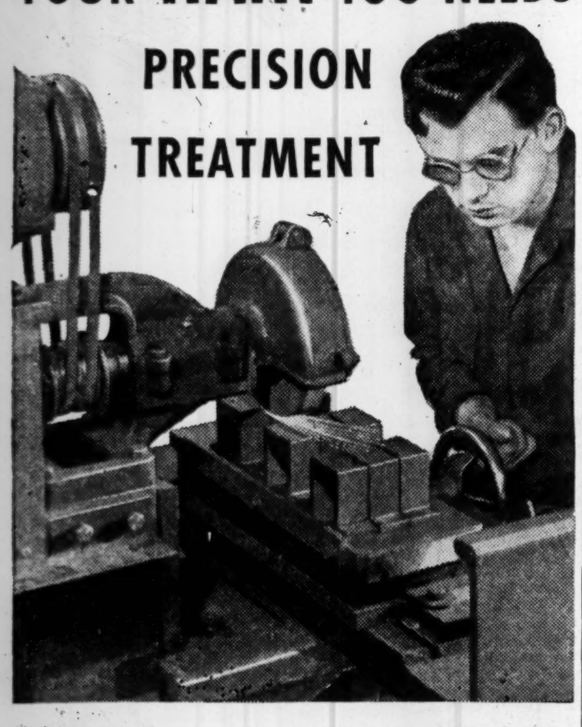

This will enable the trucker to schedule his pick-up and deliveries into a route, thus saving a large amount of present waste mileage in these operations, the ODT said. Railroads which maintain property pick-up and delivery services are included in the curfew.

The order also prohibits more than one collection for transportation from one point to another, or more than one delivery a day to any one point from another.

Lottery Big Stuff in Australia

The lottery is big stuff in Australia, if I may judge from a letter from an American businessman now a lieutenant colonel in our armed forces "down under," which is passed on to me by Harry W. Alexander, of Washington and New York.

Queensland, New South Wales and Tasmania all run state lotteries. in Queensland an ordinary lottery is run every week. Each ordinary one has 100,000 full tickets which may be broken into shares to make them easier to sell. About 64 per cent of the take is distributed as prizes which are income tax free and the big prize is 10 pounds each week with numerous smaller prizes.

The tickets are sold in what the officer says are the equivalent to our cigar stores, though over there a cigar store nearly always includes a gentleman's hair dresser of the "badger" school of hirsute attention. A "badger" haircut it achieved by placing a pot over the head and clipping all the hairs that shows around the edges.

A "badger" is a vessel of great utility to this very day in some American homes, so named because in Texas and other states it was what was put under a barrel with a rope tied to the handle for the sucker to pull out in the "badger fights" of a bygone era, I say bygone, because I hope and trust that the children of this day and age are taught in school not to fall for "badger fights."

If you do not feel fully enlightened on the subject of the "badger," please inquire further of some southwesterner as I must get on with the Queensland lottery in which the ticket seller gets a commission on every ticket sold. When he sells shares, he gets 13.6 per cent because he buys full tickets and splits them up.

Twice a year special lotteries are held. The officer explains them as in the nature of anniversary sales. One sells 200,000 tickets with a top prize of 25,000 pounds and one sells 200,000 tickets with a grand prize of 45,000 pounds, which is a tidy sum in any language.

The total administration cost is eight per cent. The state takes five per cent for taxes and 23 per cent goes for hospitals. Last year the net in Queensland, with a population of less than 1,000,000 people, was 2,000,000 pounds, so you can just imagine what my proposed American national lottery would do, drawing from 130,000,000.

I think it would net at least $500,000,000 per year, which is the estimate on the gambling on the horse races in the United States, legalized pari-mutuels and otherwise. The illegal gambling, including the numbers drawings in numerous cities, must amount to as much more.

This is the greatest gambling nation in the world, though I judge from what the officer says that Australia is not far behind us. Like the Americans, the Australians gamble on anything and everything, with horse racing second in popular favor to the lottery.

In normal times the races are run daily. It is not subject to the climate as in the United States. Both the tote and the books are in action. Now the races operate only on Saturdays with one raceless Saturday every month, and the officer says the Australians regard this as a real sacrifice.

He reports a handle of 1,000,000 pounds as not unusual, which may exceed the best (or worst, according to how you view gambling) American record made this year of a trifle short of $2,700,000 in a single day. I do not know the exact value of the pound in Australia at the moment.

The raffle is another popular form of gambling there. The officer says that in the downtown streets you are exhorted to buy raffle tickets on a basket of fruit, a set of China or a block of flats. The raffle is used to raise funds for all sorts of charities. He donated a pair of nylons for a prisoner of war raffle, and they brought 50 pounds with a carton of American cigarettes thrown in as a consolation prize.

Smashing RAF Blow Dealt Sicily's Lines To Italian Mainland

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, June 30.—(AP)—Striking from bases many hundreds of miles apart at targets separated by only six miles of water, British bombers from the North African and Middle East commands have smashed heavily at the ferry connecting Sicily with the Italian mainland in an effort to destroy the island communications and so substantially to isolate it in the event of invasion.

Announcements today from this headquarters and from Cairo told of great damage worked in these twin raids, delivered Monday night at a cost of two Allied planes.

This continued hammering of the Messina Strait was accompanied by a statement, jointly issued by the U. S. and British air forces, that the Allies had now thrown "a complete air umbrella" over the Straits of Sicily and that the whole stretch of the Mediterranean from Gibraltar to Suez thus was being opened to Allied shipping.

Supply Lines Shortened.

Alexandria, it was added, had now been brought "within little more than 3,000 miles of England by comparison with the 12,000-mile route around the Cape by which our Middle East forces had formerly to be supplied—an immense saving of time and shipping tonnage."

In Monday night's two-sided attack on the Messina Strait, Wellington bombers from the Northwest Africa force poured a heavy weight of bombs on the ferry terminus and the railway yards at Messina itself, while heavy bombers from the Middle East blasted at similar rail and ferry installations at Reggio Calabria, six miles across the water on the Italian mainland.

Night Bombardment.

On the preceding night Wellingtons had attacked yet another vital ferry port on the Strait—San Giovanni; which is directly opposite Messina.

The assault on Sicily was carried forward yesterday by fighter-bombers based on Malta. They repeatedly attacked the long-punished Italian airdrome at Comiso, destroying two Axis planes and damaging others and losing a single plane.

Middle East long-range fighters at the same time went out on forays over the west coast of Greece, shooting down an enemy plane and machine-gunning a railroad line.

The Italian communique broadcast by the Rome radio acknowledged Allied air attacks at Messina and localities along the Calabrian coast, claiming 10 Allied planes shot down.

Soaring Output Called Vital in Postwar Aims

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corp., said today "one of our most vital postwar objectives must be the attainment of new high levels of peacetime production and employment."

Speaking before the war advertising conference of the Advertising Federation of America, Hoffman discussed ramifications of the committee for economic development, of which he is chairman.

In forecasting problems that the peace would bring Hoffman declared:

"America cannot remain strong and free if in the postwar period we have too much federal employment for too long. . . . Too much government employment will result in staggering deficits, in political contamination and finally in deterioration of our people."

Club Women Approve NYA Liquidation

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., June 30. (AP)—Resolutions approving the liquidation of the National Youth Administration and another calling for American participation in creation of international machinery to establish a just peace and prevent aggressions were adopted today by the board of directors of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The board, in approving the liquidation of the NYA as soon as possible in a resolution adopted unanimously, stated that the need for the NYA no longer was acute and that it required an unnecessary expenditure of funds now needed for essential war efforts as certain other governmental agencies now were providing financial aid for deserving students.

The NYA resolution was submitted by Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, Ga., chairman of the department of public welfare; Mrs. H. C. Houghton Jr., of Red Oak, Iowa, chairman of the department of education, and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, of Washington, chairman of legislation.

Mrs. John D. Robinson, of Wallace, N. C., chairman of the United States bond and stamp committee of the war service committees, reported that clubwomen own, individually, approximately $250,000,000 worth of bonds. Individual club holdings, as organizations, total approximately $12,000,000 and the club sales for one year sold through clubs at bond booths have reached approximately $350,000,000.

The international peace resolution for creation of "international machinery for the establishment of a just peace and a prevention of dire aggressions" called for United States participation in the program "for its own self-interest."

4 Armed Men Rob Haralson Bank

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

NEWNAN, Ga.—Four armed men held up the cashier of the bank at Haralson, about 11:15 a. m. today and escaped with approximately $800 in cash from the counters, County Patrolman B. M. Brown, of Senoia, revealed.

By-standers described two of the men as red-headed and two as black-headed and said they were driving a black 1933 Ford. They did not attempt to get into the vaults of the Haralson bank but contented themselves with the available cash and drove away.

Sheriff A. L. Potts, this afternoon was in Thomaston to investigate reports that the car had been seen in that vicinity.

Gas Books Stolen In Columbus Found

RICHMOND, Va., June 30.—(AP) Five hundred "C," "D" and "E" gasoline ration books, which were identified as having been stolen from a board in Columbus, Ga., were found today in woods adjoining the Virginia Methodist Orphanage here. They represented thousands of gallons of gasoline.

The Rev. G. I. McAllen, superintendent of the orphanage, reported discovery of the books by persons at the orphanage. William C. King, chief investigator of the Richmond district OPA office, began an investigation.

Names appearing on the faces of some of the books identified them with the Columbus board, OPA officials said.

The "D" and "E" books, for motorcycle and nonhighway use, were intact, but the coupons had been removed from more than 50 of the "C" books."

Bond-Selling Women Open Meeting Today

Dr. Harriet Elliott, Former Dean, To Hold Conference.

Wrapped up in her work as super-saleswoman for the U. S. Treasury Department, where she is associate field director of the women's division of the War Finance Committee, Dr. Harriet Elliott would talk only of war bonds and the regional third war loan drive conference which she will hold here today and tomorrow at the Georgian Terrace hotel when she answered questions at a press conference yesterday.

"We've got to raise 18 billion dollars in the drive which begins September 9," the former dean of the Women's College of the University of North Carolina said firmly, "and it's the women who will have to do it."

Pointing out that it was the women who will have time to do the bond selling, Dr. Elliott also cited the fact that the women, in most families, hold the purse strings—"they spend 85 per cent of the over-the-counter money."

Buy Extra Bonds.

"Women must buy regular bonds and then extra bonds," she stated, "and when I say must, I mean just that. We must be thrifty and put every possible dollar into war bonds."

The pay-as-you-go tax which goes into effect on pay roll periods beginning today should be no excuse for being behind in war bond purchases, Dr. Elliott added.

"People ask 'how can I buy bonds when I have to pay that new 20 per cent income tax?' The answer to that one is simple, there isn't any new 20 per cent tax to pay; there's no new income tax whatever, as the rates are unchanged," she pointed out. "This is only a new method of collection. The exemptions bring the withholding down to not more than 12 per cent of the gross wages and salaries of the great majority of taxpayers, and for many the percentage is less.

Cross-Country Parleys.

Atlanta is the first stop on Dr. Elliott's cross-country schedule of conferences. Between now and July 30 she will hold similar conferences in Dallas, San Francisco, Denver, Cleveland Boston.

Mrs. Nancy C. Robinson, Dr. Elliott's advisor for the southern region, will preside over the meeting today, at which state leaders from Alabama, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia—as well as Mrs. Ralph Butler, of Dallas, Ga., who is Georgia women's division chairman—will be present.

Man Floored By Solon for Slapping South

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—An unidentified man who called a senator and a representative from Alabama a couple of "southern ——" got himself slapped down.

Representative Boykin related to reporters that it came about this way:

He and Senator Bankhead, while dining on the roof of the Washington hotel, were discussing how to handle a racial problem when an intruder asserted he could tell "you southern ——" how to do it.

Whereupon Boykin slapped the man down. Later, when the Alabamans were leaving the rooftop, the man and his party approached them, apparently bent on more trouble. A poke from Boykin put him on the floor. Then he and Bankhead departed.

Columbus May Erect Laundry for Hospital

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 30.—(AP) A proposal to erect a laundry at the City hospital was considered by city commissioners yesterday, the result of a snarl caused by crowded laundry conditions two days ago when a local laundry refused to launder the hospital's linens.

Another laundry offered to do the hospital laundry after the institution had discontinued all but emergency operations due to a shortage of clean linens.

Russell Picked To Head Global Military Trip

Republican, Massachusetts, representing the military group, and Senators Mead, Democrat, New York, and Brewster, Republican, Maine, for the Truman committee. Brewster and Russell also are members of the naval affairs committee.

Before Barkley could even announce the names, however, Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, was on his feet with the assertion that no public good was going to be served by "a junketing trip by senators or congressmen or anybody else."

Won't See Much.

"I don't think the responsible military or naval commanders are going to let them see enough to stick in their eye," Clark declared.

Clark asked who projected the idea of ending such an inspection committee in the first place, where they were going and Senator Lucas, Democrat, Illinois, demanded to know who was going to pay for it.

"I won't vote for a single dime to finance this trip," Lucas declared.

Barkley said the Army would take care of the financing, furnish the plane and decide when, where and how the members would go. Barkley stressed the fact that the committee was not to interfere in any way with the military commanders abroad.

Problem Reviewed.

Barkley reviewed the perplexing problem presented to him as long ago as March 23 when he said President Roosevelt wrote him confidentially inclosing a letter from Marshall relaying the Truman committee's request to investigate the North African front.

He said he once discussed the matter with the President, and meanwhile, the military committee "became interested in a similar trip."

"I was not enthusiastic about the proposal," he declared, "and after discussing it with both committees, I withheld by approval."

He added the chief of staff and secretary of war thought it "undesirable" to have "a series of committees traveling abroad," but that they could provide facilities for one.

HEY, DADDY!—Little Donna Lynn Gwinn, born February 11, sends love and kisses to her daddy, Third Class Petty Officer Harold Alexander Gwinn, who has been in New Zealand since last July. Mrs. Gwinn resides at 1472 Gordon street.

HERE'S LOOKING AT YOU—Nine-month-old John Michael Milton, son of Mrs. James Oliver Milton, of 78 Claire drive, is mighty proud of his dad, who is a lieutenant (j. g). in New Zealand. Lieutenant Milton went overseas in July.

Dads Soon To See V-Mail Babies

Pictures of two adorable youngsters—and their mothers—soon will be winging their way over oceans and jungles to distant New Zealand, where they will be proudly passed around to friends by their fighting dads, thanks to Uncle Sam's V-mail and The Constitution's newly inaugurated service to send pictures of babies never seen by their fathers overseas.

Pretty little Donna Lynn Gwinn and John Michael Milton, a bouncing boy, were the first two babies to be photographed by The Constitution's photographers, and their pictures will be imprinted on V-mail blanks to be sent to their dads, both serving in Uncle Sam's Navy.

Donna Lynn's father, Harold Alexander Gwinn, is a third class petty officer, while John's daddy, James Oliver Milton, bears the rank of lieutenant (j.g.). Both are based in New Zealand and have been overseas since July.

The two babies were brought to the fourth floor of The Constitution by their mothers, who contacted the military editor. Pictures were made by staff photographers in the studio. V-mail blanks, with the pictures imprinted on them, will be mailed to the mothers, who will send them on to those proud papas.

Mothers with babies under one year of age, whose child has never been seen by the father now in the armed services, are invited to participate in this new Constitution service.

Sewage Plant Construction Is Discussed

East Point Watershed Situation Is Called an Emergency.

Elimination of a health menace affecting residents of the East Point watershed and communities along the Flint river appeared an early possibility yesterday as the Fulton county commissioners instructed Robert & Company to draw up plans immediately for a sewage disposal plant near Hapeville.

Estimates on the cost of sewers to replace open ditches along two sides of the municipal airport and running into the river also were requested.

Meeting with the commissioners were representatives of city, state and federal governments and of Hapeville, College Park and East Point. All the governments represented will be expected to contribute a share in the cost of the project, which has been hanging fire for 10 years.

An Emergency.

Commissioner Ed L. Almand brought up the sewage question by stating that, due to the growth of defense activities in the area, construction of the disposal plant and the sewers had become an emergency. Commissioner Ellis Barrett then moved that Robert & Company be instructed to draw up plans at once. The motion passed unanimously.

County Attorney Harold Sheats told the commission that originally the cost of the project had been estimated at $125,000, but that now estimates had more than doubled that figure. He said that the federal government some time ago offered to put up $55,000 of the expense.

Federal Agency Will Aid.

John C. Daniel, senior engineer for Georgia of the Federal Works Agency, said that the agency would make a substantial contribution, but would expect the other governments affected to bear their share. He urged their representatives to find out how much they could pay without placing too great a burden on taxpayers, and bring their figures to the agency. He said that if the expense were borne in this fashion, the federal government's part ownership in the project would revert to the other governments after the war.

N. M. de Jarnette, of the State Department of Health, said that his department had been alarmed at the growth of the health menace caused by open sewage ditches and untreated sewage flowing into the Flint river.

Two Agencies Here Send Out Room Appeals

Service Men's Center, War Housing Center Ask Home Registration.

Appeals for home registrations in "share-the-home" movements continued from two agencies here yesterday, as the Service Men's Center and the newly organized War Housing Center sought quarters for persons in the armed forces and those brought here by war projects.

Rooms and apartments for service men and their families are being sought by the Service Men's Center. Residents of the Atlanta area are urged to register their spare rooms with this center on Courtland street, next to the municipal auditorium.

The War Housing Center will open its offices this morning at 101 Walton street, N. W., to register housing facilities for hundreds of new war workers coming into the Atlanta area.

N. Y. Business 'Mirror' Pays First Dividend in Ten Years

Directors of the Exchange Buffet Corporation declared a dividend of 15 cents a share on the capital stock, the first in 10 years, payable July 31 to stock of record July 15.

For as long as anyone can remember the chain of famous eating establishments has been inextricably bound up with the affairs of the downtown business and financial district and its fortunes have faithfully mirrored the general level of affairs in the district served.

The concern operates 22 restaurants in Manhattan, most of them in the financial district. Thousands of customers from every walk of life who patronize the places daily never get a check but add up the amount of their bill themselves and pay it to an unquestioning cashier on the way out.

LIFE must go on, somehow. Motor-cars are jacked up. Common carriers are loaded. Yet the need to get around is more vital than ever.

Your business and professional contacts are on the edge of town now. The war Agencies have taken over vast areas of downtown space, and normal services are hard to reach.

You must, therefore, help us conserve our mileage. The ideal would be every mile a useful mile.

We may never reach that ideal, but with co-operation we can approach it. If we know you are going to need a Yellow Cab, we can plan to send someone out your way in the cab that brings you back.

If we don't know, we have the choice between failing to serve you, or wasting precious miles.

Every mile we wear out needlessly is a mile we cannot deliver to somebody who will really need it next year.

So when you want a Yellow Cab—give the Dispatching Switchboard at least 15 minutes notice if you can and be ready when the cab comes.

Soviets Deny Nazis Shifted 50 Divisions

MOSCOW, June 30.—(AP)—The Communist newspaper Pravda asserted today that Germany has a total strength of 211 divisions on the Russian front and that no divisions have been shifted from that front to other theaters of operation by the Reich's high command.

Pravda challenged a report emanating from London underground sources that 50 German divisions had been ordered from the Soviet front to bolster defenses elsewhere in Europe in anticipation of an Allied invasion of Europe.

According to Pravda the facts are as follows: On the Russian front there are 211 German divisions instead of 180, and "no German divisions have been shifted from the Russian front."

On the other fronts, according to Pravda "there are 91 German divisions instead of 120." Pravda added "there is not a single German division in Italy at the present time."

Soviets Wipe Out Company of Infantry

LONDON, July 1.—(Thursday) (AP)—Massed Soviet artillery fire wiped out a company of attacking infantrymen yesterday in the Leningrad sector, Moscow announced early today, while the German radio suggested that the Black Sea-Caucasus front was stirring once more.

In the air the Red air force maintained a vigil over the long front. Nine German planes were declared shot down in the last 24 hours.

The midnight bulletin, recorded by the Soviet monitor, announced that 1,000 German troops were killed during a Soviet air attack on Pskov near the Estonian border June 23, when a German military headquarters, munition and fuel dumps, and 12 parked planes were destroyed.

WASHINGTON, June 30—(AP)—The senate completed congressional action today on a $71,500,000,000 War Department appropriations bill providing funds for the next 12 months three times as large as the nation's cost of the first World War.

Termed the "decisive budget" for the war by military leaders, it supplies more than $50,000,000 for Army aviation, including purchase of 99,740 new planes.

White Streak On Peachtree Means Obey It

State Highway Department workers completed the job yesterday of painting a long white line down the middle of Peachtree road from the spot where the new paving begins just inside the city limits on out to the Fulton-DeKalb line.

There are two sides now to Peachtree road, a matter that might amaze some of the motorists who have been driving recklessly down the unmarked left hand side.

Next Wednesday, the Fulton county commission will pass a police regulation making it a misdemeanor for any motorist to drive to the left of that white line, it was said.

"Until then," said County Police Chief George Mathieson, "I am sending police out there to help educate the public. We'll do what we can until we get the new regulation, but everyone is warned that he must stay to the right side of that white line."

County officials yesterday expressed their gratitude to the state for its co-operation in completing the new surfacing of the road.

"There's no law now," said one, "to compel motorists to observe the new white marking. But we'll stop the present practice of helter-skelter driving with our regulation next week."

City Employes Get Holiday on July 5

City employes, including school and non-school workers, will have a holiday next Monday, July 5, in observance of the Fourth of July, it was decided yesterday.

Mayor Hartsfield said he will declare Monday a holiday. He previously had indicated he would proclaim the holiday but when Governor Arnall expressed doubt about observing Monday for the Fourth, the mayor said he wished to consider the matter further.

Under the city charter, city council must meet Monday even though it is a proclaimed holiday.

The city hall will be closed except for the time the council is in session.

Navy Board Here Gets Bigger Area

Activities of the New Orleans Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board will be discontinued effective July 15, according to word received from Washington by Lieutenant Commander L. C. Priestman, senior member, and the territory formerly served by the New Orleans board will be divided between the Dallas and Atlanta boards.

Louisiana and Arkansas will be under Dallas, and Mississippi will be transferred to the Atlanta board.

"The closing of the New Orleans board," Commander Priestman said, "is in line with the Navy's policy of cutting down on personnel attached to shore activities everywhere."

Plus 38's in Army Now Probably in To Stay

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP) This is the last day on which men over 38 in the Army in this country can apply for release to take jobs in agriculture and essential industry.

If any of the men who wanted to be released have overlooked the July 1 deadline, it is probably too late to start—the application has to be accompanied by written evidence that the man will be employed in essential industry, the most acceptable being a letter from his prospective employer.

Air Raid Siren Gasps Out False Alarm

Periodic gasps from an air raid siren in the Alabama-Forsyth street section yesterday afternoon caused some curiosity but no excitement among shoppers and workers in the area.

One reason for the lack of excitement was that it had occurred before when workmen were repairing the signal. Another was that the people apparently have learned the proper signals.

A few curious persons, however, telephoned newspapers to see if there was an air raid test, and a check with defense control officials disclosed that it was all a false alarm.

Eden Tells Mussolini To Accept Surrender

LONDON, June 30.—(AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden called upon Mussolini today "to accept the unconditional surrender offered to him," and said Britain has not and does not intend to approach Italy regarding the question of bombing Rome.

Addressing commons, Eden declared "I think it would be in the interests of humanity if Signor Mussolini was to realize that the best thing he can do for his country is to accept the unconditional surrender terms offered to him."

Fred Sington Reports to Navy As Lieutenant

Fred W. Sington, who tackled his way to All-American football honors for the University of Alabama in 1929-30, left here yesterday as lieutenant (j. g.) USNR, to report for duty.

He received his commission through the Atlanta office of Naval Officer Procurement.

OWI's Domestic Fund Restored by Senate

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP) The senate tonight voted to revoke the death sentence which the house had decreed for the domestic operations branch of the Office of War Information, but placed a $3,561,499 limit on the amount the division may spend for its home front activities during the new fiscal year beginning at midnight.

A $27,003,590 item for OWI's overseas operations branch, plus various administrative appropriations, brought the information office's total appropriation for the 1944 fiscal year to $35,037,593.

Before voting the $3,561,499 fund for OWI's domestic operations, the senate rejected, 40 to 34, a move by Senator O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, to grant $5,500,000 for the office's home front work. The latter sum had been approved by the House Appropriations Committee, but on the floor of the house, the whole domestic fund had been wiped out.

Void No-Strike Pledge, Michigan CIO Urges

DETROIT, June 30.—(AP)—The Michigan State CIO Council today recommended to its affiliated unions and to the national CIO that labor's no-strike pledge no longer be considered binding unless the "assurances made to labor" at the time the pledge was made are "immediately put into operation."

These assurances, the CIO council declared, were that the cost of living would be kept down, that adequate adjustment machinery would be maintained to settle management-labor grievances and that taxes would not place undue burdens upon the working man.

Girl Should Return Ring If She Marries Someone Else

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

My brother has been overseas on active duty for two months. Just before he left he became engaged and gave the girl a very pretty ring. At Christmas he gave her a watch and yesterday the girl married soneone else without returning the ring. The law is that he can demand the ring back and get it, but since he isn't here what should we do about it? It would take so long to write him and get an answer it would be too late to do anything. Also what about the watch? Should we ask for it if she isn't lady enough to return it?

SISTER.

I do not think that you have any chance of getting back the wrist watch, as it was a Christmas present, for under the law one does not have to return such gifts as these. As for the ring, I think you should do everything to regain it. If this girl hasn't the decency or the feeling to return it, no treatment can be too harsh to deal her in carrying your point. There is no need to consider her feelings, either, for by law the ring is rightfully your brother's and he should have it. Write to her in your name as representing your brother. Tell her that the ring must be returned to you, as your brother is not here and that you will receive it by proxy. If in a reasonable length of time she has not returned it, go to see her yourself, and if that brings no results, then tell her you will be forced to have a lawyer settle the case, as no satisfactory agreement can be reached out of court.

NOT NECESSARY TO DISCUSS DIVORCE

Dear Dixie:

I have had the misfortune of being deeply disappointed with my marriage, and at present I am filing for a divorce. Now here is an added problem to all of my previous troubles. It is necessary for me to continue bearing his name until my final decree is granted. And quite often, out-of-town friends who know nothing about our separation ask me about him since he has entered the armed services. He joined the Merchant Marine after our separation. Must I speak casually to these friends of the whereabouts of my husband or should I acknowledge and inform them of our disaster? It is a very painful and embarassing subject to me, and I had rather not speak of it unless it is necessary. I have tried to keep everything as quiet as possible, so what must I do about telling these friends about our divorce?

ANXIOUS.

I do not think you would be called upon to discuss your divorce with any of these former friends. It is none of their business, and you have the right to keep things to yourself. I would suggest that the next time one of them asks you about him, just tell them simply, quietly and without comment that "John is in the Merchant Marines now. I don't suppose you knew that we are getting a divorce, did you?" Then let the matter rest at that. Don't, by all means discuss the divorce, the reasons for getting it or anything connected with it, with anyone. Let them think whatever they choose because they will anyway, and it is not dignified nor good taste for you to be broadcasting your personal affairs to the world. The fact that the affair is painful to you, makes it all the more necessary that you keep your own counsel. Unless you are asked a point blank question about your ex-husband that would require an answer as mentioned above, I think it would be wise if no reference is made to him at all. Try to avoid any mention of his name in the conversations. If these friends had two ounces of sense they would not be asking so many questions about him if they see that you are not referring to him in any way.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edythe Thomas Wallace

Father: "Excuse Mother and me, will you, Daughter? We've both finished our dinner and we want to hear the news broadcast."

Daughter: "I'm not through yet."

Father: "Well, you're such a slow eater, you can't expect the rest of us to sit here all day."

The best way of making sure our children will be courteous is to use consistently the courtesies we wish them to imitate.

Irene Dunne, 'Screen's Perfect Lady,' Returns to Wacky Comedy

By Louella O. Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, July 1.—(INS) Irene Dunne, who has been called the screen's perfect lady, is returning to wacky comedy. When she reports to Columbia, it will be to star in "The Road to Yesterday," another one of those zany numbers on the order of "Theodora Goes Wild, and "The Awful Truth." Irene has good reason to be thankful to "Theodora Goes Wild," for it was the movie that put her over even better than her serious "The Magnificent Obsession."

"Road to Yesterday" was auauthored by Stanley Russell and Harry Beberman and is the story of a repressed young widow and a highly unfortunate millionaire. She has never had any fun in her life until a tempestuous sculptor arrives to make a bust of her husband. From there on in the lady turns loose (censors please be calm until you see the movie!)

Michael (once called Eddie) O'Shea's first wife, "Lady of Burlesque" brought Hunt Stromberg, his discoverer, plenty of offers. Miko was brought here from the play "The Eve of St. Mark." He is now all set to be starred in Samuel Bronston's "Story of Jack London," wife of the adventurous author. Alfred Santell will direct the London biography, and it offers plenty of change for color. London was quite a boy.

One of the best sagas of the current war is "The Raft," by Robert Trumbull, the story of three Navy fliers who drift for 34 days in a rubber raft. At the time of publication it was bought by Edward Small and he has had his troubles trying to cast it with the right actors. He feels he has made a head start now for George Brent agreed, over the weekend, to play the lead, and it is easily one of the most dramatic roles of the year.

Just heard about two pretty smart Hollywood girls, one named Mary Anita Loos (pretty enough to be a movie actress) and her friend, Louise Rousseau, a cutter on the Columbia lot. Some time ago Louise was a secretary at the General Service Studios, where Mary Anita graces a desk. The girls got together and wrote a scenario called "Jenny Makes Up Her Mind." Three studios bid for it and M-G-M finally won out. The price paid was a five-figure sum and Mary Anita's aunt, Anita Loos, wouldn't have been as pleased if she had written the opus herself.

Chatter in Hollywood: The Douglas McLeans (Barbara Barondess) are expecting their first visit from the stork after almost five years of marriage. If you are too young to remember Doug in his wonderful silent-day comedies, then you really missed a lot. He was one of the biggest stars, and later the producer of many amusing comedies. Lately he and his actress-wife, Barbara, have opened a swank interior decorating shop.

A Line or Two: "The Pin-Up Girl," says Dame May Whitty, "isn't a new thing. Gladys Cooper was our No. 1 pin-up girl in the last World War. She was the London rage of the London stage." Gladys, remember, was an Academy Award candidate for her performance as Bette Davis' mother in "Now Voyager" . . . Jan Struther, who brought her two children to Hollywood, says California was a welcome sight. They traveled on a train that normally takes care of 300, but which carried 1,000 people cross country. It was late and the last day they had no food. She has moved into a small house, where she will write her first movie, "Women of Britain."

IRENE DUNN.

George Montgomery is back in Hollywood. He's a private in the Army and is making government shorts at Fort Roach. Now that he's a soldier, George is taking a more pleasant view of matrimony and you can look for something in this line with George and Dinah Shore . . . Henry Koster was looking slightly bewildered when I saw him on the lot at Metro the other afternoon. It was Henry's first day here and he was getting his bearings. He told me that his reason for leaving Universal for Metro was to join forces again with his producer of the Deanna Durbin successes, Joseph Pasternak. Koster's first film will also be the first for Lana Turner following the birth of her baby next month. It is called "Music for Millions." In his spare time Koster is looking for a vehicle for Garbo, whom he admires and would like to direct.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random. The James Cagneys, 'tis said, have adopted a second child—a little girl; Turman Bey, the answer to every Hollywood maiden's prayer, has eyes only for Rose Hobart; Irene, the designer, has just received word that her husband, Captain Elliott Gibbons, stationed in Africa, is a malaria victim; Kay Kyser's new honey, Marilyn Maxwell, looks very much like Ginny Simms; Ida Lupino is ill again and off the "In Our Time" set. She has had a tough time; Betty Furness dining with her ex, Johnny Green, at the Beverly Hills Derby; Theodore Dreiser is so secretive about his new book, "The Bulwark," he won't even let his agent know the subject matter; Alice Faye celebrated Phil Harris' birthday with a party for him at Charley Foy's. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Today's Charm Tip

A magic charm potion is contained in the capsule: "Don't tell them. Let them tell you!"

Avoid 'Desk-Chair Spread,' Eat Correctly

By Ida Jean Kain.

The average office worker seems predestined for the desk-chair spread. It isn't that she gains so much weight—as a rule, she doesn't—but practically all the excess settles right on the hipline.

If this has happened to you, the loss of those few extra pounds will make an amazing improvement in your figure. You don't have to follow a set of strict menus. You can reduce on an easy-does-it diet. Of course, you will have to take a few of the right exercises, too, but the diet is what it takes to dislodge extra pounds. Let's take that first.

And to encourage you, I want to tell you about a business girl who has just brought her weight down from 140 pounds to 125 (she is five fet, four inches tall). She says she didn't diet, but followed a "pattern for eating" and that "the going was tough only the first week. After that, I felt better every day I was losing weight. If I had known how easy it is, I would have slimmed down long ago!"

Her "pattern" measures up perfectly to the nutrition yardstick and yet it is easily fitted to anyone's three meals a day. As it is with a lot of you, her big stumbling-block was lunch. You probably don't have time to eat in a place where particular attention is paid to nutrition. A squirt from the carbonated water tank and a scoop of ice cream give you enough calories to tide you over the rest of the day—but not enough of the nutrition essentials. Our business girl packed her own lunch. She usually put up a sandwich made with 100 per cent wholewheat bread and chopped egg, meat, or a slice of cheese, with mustard instead of butter on the bread. She wrapped up raw carrot sticks, celery, or a tomato for variety, and carried fruit for dessert—sometimes two pieces instead of the vegetables—and always a pint thermos filled with cold skim milk. She has one glass at noon, and the other around 4 in the afternoon.

She started with a good breakfast; either orange juice, tomato juice or half of a grapefruit; a soft-boiled egg with one thin slice of sparsely buttered toast, or a poached egg on unbuttered toast, or a whole grain cereal with one-half glass of milk, and clear coffee. That is a low-calorie meal high in protection.

At dinner she always had some protein dish, meat, fish, fowl, or eggs or cheese, and two vegetables. Often she had one cooked green leafy vegetable and another green for the salad. Her next choice was a cooked yellow vegetable plus the salad. Again, she had fruit for dessert. The amount of bread for dinner depended on breakfast and lunch. She limited herself to four slices per day.

And that is the plan she followed to lose 15 pounds without dieting. If you will adapt your menus to it, you can make as good a record. But there's another part to her story. She improved her measurements even faster than she lost weight—and that's tomorrow's story.

If you prefer to have your slimming menus all planned for you, send large stamped return envelope, enclosing three cents in stamps or coin to cover cost of handling, for Ida Jean Kain's new "Victory Reducing Diet."

MY DAY: Praises Older Volunteers

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 29.—In my travels the other day I found myself seated next to a man who was on his way to the induction camp. He was no youngster and so I inquired how he came to be going into the Army. He told me he was a bricklayer by trade, had done some building in Washington and in various other parts of the country. Some one representing the Army engineers had come to his union and asked for volunteers, so he had presented himself for voluntary induction and expected to go to camp in Louisiana to become one of our Army builders, who have made such a record for themselves all through Africa and in the Southwest Pacific.

The Navy has a similar group, the Seabees, who build shore establishments all over the world.

My neighbor on the train is 36 years old, and has two children, 13 and 15. His wife has a good job, and although she was very angry with him for voluteering, he said he felt it was his duty. This man, who had been his own master for many years, said, "I guess I'll have to learn to do as I am told, but they say if you do that, you do not get into much trouble."

I have often praised the spirit of youth as it goes out to meet adventure. But today I would like to say a word for those who are a little older, who are already started in work which they enjoy, and which perhaps is useful in the civilian life of the country, but who still feel that it is their job to be where danger is a little closer to them. I know a good many of these men. It may not fall to their lot to do the heroic things which bring medals, but they are the stuff which America develops, and they are the men who will come back to be the responsible citizens of the future.

I was talking to a young officer the other day who feels very strongly that a democratic army must have something which is above and beyond that which makes just a good army. You can be a good soldier and yet not be a good citizen of a democracy, and a democratic army must be made up of men who are good soldiers but who also are conscious of the fact that their future depends on their being good citizens of a democracy. Therefore, even as they fight they must think about what they want to do with their victory, what they want to accomplish when they come home again, and what they want their families to do while they are gone.

I have been seeing several members of my family in New York City during the last 24 hours, and paying visits to the Doctors' hospital each day. Now I am back in Washington.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist

March 21-April 19 (ARIAS)—Personal interests and seeking favors are apt to be successful throughout the day, and after 7:02 p. m. should be favorable for attending to old duties, affairs that have been hanging fire, and dealings with older or conservative people.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—This should be a successful day for dealings with friends or interests in which friends are involved, but matters of health should have stricter attention.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—While your thoughts or mental activities will be racing with you today, it will be better to attend to affairs not in the open, or which are not of a public nature. Give careful consideration to personal matters or personal interviews to avoid errors.

June 21-July 22 (CANCER)—In most affairs you should be successful, provided you do not enter into affairs hurriedly. If a feeling of tension is held in check, the entire day favors dealings with people in positions over you.

July 23-August 22 (LEO)—Interruptions and sudden changes may be in order today, but hold your temper and nerves within bounds. You will find yourself the loser if you allow yourself to blow up.

August 23-September 22 (VIRGO)—Feelings of happiness and buoyancy make themselves felt today and will be a great help in your daily life. However, steer away from secretive matters and guard your secrets.

September 23-October 22 (LIBRA)—Do not attempt too much steam today. You are likely to want to do more than you should. Therefore, use caution in travel or enjoyment.

October 23-November 21 (SCORPIO)—You are nearing the low point of your year, so important matters may drag, or you may feel that you are not getting your share. Therefore, try to give more attention to unimportant matters.

November 22-December 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Financial matters in which you are associated with others are apt to meet hindrances, but your personal efforts should meet with greater brightness.

December 22-January 19 (CAPRICORN)—You may look for a slight change for the better in your affairs today, and new starts may be planned to be put into action during July. Watch your health.

January 20-February 18 (AQUARIUS)—Take particular pains to understand others, as there is some likelihood that misunderstandings will arise. Friends can be helpful and old matters are disturbing.

February 19-March 20 (PISCES)—This is apt to be a mixed day, when new affairs and new friends prove helpful, but public affairs are disappointing.

Health Advice For Young, Middle-Aged Adults

By Dr. William Brady.

Editor's Note:

This is the introduction to a series of talks Dr. Brady gives for his friends the ol' timers. These articles will prove of great practical value for young and middle-aged adults who want to remain young or to retard the encroachment of age. Physicians interested in geriatrics will find that Dr. Brady's advice supplements their work with their elderly patients.

In the past five years there have been numerous new books dealing with geriatrics. Probably you have no idea what geriatrics means. Having dipped into the new books pretty extensively I wonder if the people who knocked 'em together know what it means.

Well, perhaps you know what pediatrics means. Just in case, let's make believe you don't, and so I can tell you it means the branch of medicine dealing with children (pais or paidos being Greek for child, boy), their hygiene, physiology, nutrition, diseases. As a specialist the pediatrist takes over as soon as the obstetrician has made sure the baby is breathing all right and bids fair to be a good Democrat, and hangs on, in many instances, until the child eventually cuts loose and actually supports himself, say by the time he turns thirty.

Geriatrics is that branch of medicine which deals with the hygiene, health and diseases of the aged (Geron being Greek for an old man, iatrikos meaning treatment or medicine.)

The new textbooks on the subject have practically nothing to say about the aged, their hygiene, health or diseases. Except in the preface. They are, like most medical books of the day, obviously knocked together to sell; not written by the nominal author under his own power or inspiration.

The great beloved Dr. Abraham Jacobi, of New York, was the father of pediatrics, although he never made a noise like a specialist in all his life. Dr. Jacobi, born in Germany in 1830, gave the first course of instruction in treatment of diseases of infancy in 1859, and, true to tradition, the general medical profession of the time sneered at the new idea. That the "leaders" of medical thought were narrow-minded and arbitrary, is evidenced by the fact that it was not until 37 years later that the first textbook of pediatrics appeared.

In 1940 there were thirteen million persons past 60, nine million past 65 years of age, in the United States.

High time that the physical well-being as well as the economic security of all these people received some consideration.

• • • THE "FLAG OF THE UNITED NATIONS" was displayed for the first time by any patriotic society at the recent flag day celebration of the Atlanta Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. This colorful flag was made by Miss Alberta Malone, the chapter historian. Miss Malone has a collection of flags, including the flags of the United Nations, and the various flags that have been officially used by the American colonies and the federal government.

But flag making is only one of Miss Malone's accomplishments. She is one of those fortunate ones who is constantly surrounded by her interesting hobbies. In her unique studio on Juniper street she "let herself go," to express her intense interest in astrology. The studio walls are papered in white and silver striped paper, with a design of ivy leaves climbing in the corners from the floor to the sky-blue ceiling. A golden design representing the sun centers the ceiling, and revolving around the design are the planets in their respective colors, sizes, positions, and distances from the sun. Just below the ceiling are symbols of the signs of the zodiac, and maps of the hemispheres decorate the studio walls.

Still another interesting part of her studio is the "friendship" garden, so called because each plant is connected with some special person. Think of all the fond memories that must come with each new bud and flower!

Aside from her activities, she finds many hours each day to busy herself around her home, attending to her household duties and browsing around her fine library. She was recently elected vice president of the Atlanta Library Club, but her career as a librarian is only one of her remarkable activities.

Because of her study, research and various interests, Miss Malone is capable of filling her many offices in cultural and patriotic organizations.

The Reads resided here several years ago and Elizabeth attended North Fulton High school and was a popular member of the younger set. Her father was prominently connected with the Firestone Tire Company here, and although they have been away from Atlanta several years, Mrs. Read and Elizabeth came back here to make their home on Peachtree-Dunwoody road while Major Read is in service.

Lieutenant Anderson, of New York, is now stationed at the Army headquarters in Wyoming, having obtained leave to be married to Elizabeth, the ceremony climaxing a romance which began several years ago.

Miss Maxine Land Marries Earl M. Holt in Dallas, Texas

DALLAS, Texas, June 30.—A marriage of wide interest here and in Georgia, the native state of the lovely bride, was that of Miss Maxine Land, of Atlanta, to Earl Moore Holt, of Dallas, which was solemnized here today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Brown Quillian Jr. on South Versailles street. Mrs. Quillian is the former Miss Gertrude Land, of Atlanta, and is the only sister of the bride. The ceremony took place at high noon in the presence of members of the immediate families.

The bride's matron of honor and only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Quillian, who was attractively attired in a costume of grey triple sheer with matching accessories. Her flowers were purple-throated orchids. Mr. Quillian was the bridegroom's best man.

The bride, who is of the blond type, was beautifully gowned in a mid-season model of navy tucked chiffon, fashioned with a white blouse of embroidered batiste edged with English thread lace and accentuated with chalk pearl cartridge buttons. This was worn over a foundation of crepe of matching shade. Her hat was a white pompadour model of Swiss milan, trimmed with navy veiling caught at each side in a butterfly bow and extending waist-length. Her accessories were of navy. She wore with this costume Chinese antique bracelets of blue and silver design and a shoulder cluster of white orchids.

Mrs. Holt is the daughter of the late Judge Max E. Land and Mrs. Land, of Atlanta. Her only brother is Taylor E. Land, of Indianapolis. On her maternal side she is descended from the Pruitts, Rileys, Wilburns and Roundtrees of Virginia and South Carolina. Cafe Patron Hurt Resisting Arrest

John Henry Webb, Negro, 18, of 826 Ashby place, S. W., was admitted to Grady hospital in a serious condition yesterday, suffering from a gunshot wound in the chest, the result of a tussle with Patrolman E. G. Cowan, who attempted to arrest him for questioning on a disorderly conduct charge.

The fight between the officer and the Negro took place near 112 Taliaferro court. According to police reports, the Negro was charged with creating disorder in a Negro cafe and fled when officers arrived to investigate. He attempted to take Cowan's gun from him and the officer fired, the report said.

Tobacco Sales In Georgia To Open July 27

RICHMOND, Va., June 30.—(AP) The Tobacco Association of the United States today fixed dates for the opening of sales on flue-cured markets throughout the southeastern states, starting with the Georgia-Florida belt July 27, but extended the time for opening of the auction two weeks beyond those recommended by a committee of growers and warehousemen at Raleigh, N. C., Sunday.

The association agreed to open the Georgia-Florida sales on the date asked by the committee but set opening days for the other flue-cured markets as follows:

South Carolina-border belt, August 5; eastern Carolina belt, August 24; middle belt, September 13, and old belt, September 20.

The North Carolina group had asked that the South Carolina-border auctions begin August 3, those in the eastern Carolina belt August 19, those in the middle belt August 31, and those in the old belt, September 7.

A. B. Carrington Jr., of Danville, was re-elected president. Also renamed were Vice Presidents L. L. Gravely, of Rocky Mount, N. C.; H. R. Pettus, of Richmond, and Clyde B. Austin, of Greeneville, Tenn. The association re-elected members of the board of governors and added R. C. Stokes, of Lynchburg, as an honorary life member, and H. A. Ford, of Richmond, to succeed Stokes; J. G. Boatwright, of Danville, to succeed C. W. Toms Jr., Durham, N. C., deceased, and W. Coalter Paxton, of Wilson, N. C.

President Carrington, in his review of affairs of the tobacco industry in the past year, noted that the Commodity Credit Corporation had acquired an average of 22 per cent of the last four flue-cured crops. "If we estimate the 1943 crop at 800,000,000 pounds," he said, "it is now thought that the government will want to acquire approximately 39 per cent of this quantity."

Of the 725,000,000 green pounds of flue-cured leaf purchased by the Commodity Credit Corporation, Carrington said 407,562,000 pounds had been shipped through that agency to lend-lease countries. 42,000,000 pounds repurchased for shipment by exporters, with 208,-426,000 pounds still in the corporation's hands on May 1.

The heavy lend-lease shipments, the association president inferred, have been brought about "by a decline in the growth of colonial tobacco in India, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, due to shortage of growers' man power and to lack of shipping space after the crops are harvested.

"There is a decline in the supply of English colonial growth, with the exception of Canada, and Great Britain has turned back to this country for additional flue-cured growth. . . ."

L. L. Gravely, of Rocky Mount, N. C., vice president and chairman of the association's legislative manpower committee, reported that efforts had been made to have federal authorities declare tobacco handling an essential activity, but that so far no definite results had been obtained. He expressed the hope, however, that some concrete action might result before the opening of the Georgia-Florida markets.

LEAVE FOR INDUCTION.

TIFTON, Ga., June 30.—Thirty-seven white men from Tift county left Monday morning for induction into the armed forces according to a report by Miss Dot Slack, secretary local draft board.

Guy Whitehead Aged 5 Years, Killed by Car

Guy Whitehead Jr., 5, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Whitehead Sr., of 1087 Cumberland road, died in a Griffin hospital late yesterday of injuries received when struck by an auto as he played near an aunt's house on the outskirts of Sunnyside.

The child, born in Atlanta, had been visiting with the aunt for a period during the summer.

State Patrol headquarters in Griffin said an investigation had failed to reveal the identity of the driver of the death car at a late hour last night.

"We were informed that after striking the child the man driving the car got out, seemed to be crying, and then got back in his automobile and drove away, apparently to get help," spokesman for the state patrol station said.

The father, an employe of the Cleveland Electric Company, with offices in Atlanta, was notified of the fatal injury to his only son by telephone and left immediately for Sunnyside.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Remembrance.

Do we remember?
What a great question!
We remember you in all we do,
In all we think, in all we say;
You're with us today and every day:
Death took away the earthly frame
What was really you remains the same,
Remains with us to cheer and bless.
God gives us strength to stand the test.
Oh, yes, we remember!
We'll never forget.
Keep the gates ajar;
We will greet you yet—
In the morning!

In memory of the late Floyd L. Johnson, our husband and father, who left us one year ago today.
MRS. FLOYD L. JOHNSON.

Clubs Thrive It now develops that, in spite of loss of members to the armed forces and so forth and so on, there is no shortage in the rolls of the city's country clubs. There is only a shortage of golf balls.

Those clubs that don't have waiting lists—a couple of them have such lists for the first time in years—are well off in membership.

But there is a shortage of golf balls, even recapped balls, and no relief is in sight.

Gene Dahlbender Sr. was talking about it the other day.

"The golf ball shortage is becoming serious," he pointed out. "And there is no indication that the situation is to be relieved any time soon."

A golf club is a great institution, which many people are finding out for the first time. With vacation trips restricted, they have joined clubs and found the associations most pleasant.

East Lake, Capital City, Druid Hills and Ansley Park are in an era of expansion and enjoying same. There is no finer exercise than golf and, as mentioned, there is the added pleasure of good fellowship.

A lot of people are wondering how they overlooked such pleasant surroundings in other years. They know now there is no substitute for a good golf club.

Chances are the golf ball supply will not dwindle to the disappearing point, but it is important to turn in old balls.

Attractive Games Coach Bill Alexander isn't ready to announce the complete schedule of the Georgia Tech Jackets in football, but it is shaping up as one of the best in some time.

Road games are scheduled with Navy, Notre Dame and Tulane.

Tech will take 'em as they come and probably include a couple of service teams on a full schedule.

Boys of the naval unit will enroll next week and a few football players are expected as a result.

College football in our section will be as interesting as ever. The players will be younger, for the most part, but they won't need any map to find their way around on a gridiron.

A Tribute Lieutenant Elmer G. Salter, peacetime sports publicist and Auburn coach, forwards a clipping from "Tail Spin," a paper from Lawson Field, Ga. It is a tribute to Joe Bartlett and shows once again what men think of the athletes serving with them. As Elmer George points out, "the athletes are the leaders Uncle Sam needs."

The writer in "Tail Spin" said: "As we conclude this week's column we wish to dedicate it to First Lieutenant Joseph S. Bartlett, who was killed when his plane crashed during a routine training flight. A fine sportsman and competitor, Lieutenant Bartlett was a gentleman on the playing field and in the public eye. He was possessed with a fighting spirit to win. He will be missed on the playing field by everyone who knew him, as well as in other activities. But most of all, he always will be remembered as a typical example of one of America's great athletes and a typical example of the airmen that make up the U. S. Army Air Field Force. The sympathy of the officers and enlisted men of Lawson Field is extended to the family of the deceased."

Joe was a fine type of boy and made his mark at Georgia Tech. He wasn't an All-Southeastern or anything like that, but he was the kind of boy who helped make a team successful without capturing the headlines. They're the kind of boys whose true worth is measured after they're gone.

Lieutenant Salter, who has been stationed at Bainbridge since leaving Auburn, is looking forward to the day he can resume his old duties at the Loveliest Village.

And he is prepared "to start a long list of alibis why Tech defeated Auburn, the conqueror of the Rose Bowl champions."

Eight Cardinals Chosen On National All-Stars

Mel Ott and Billy Herman Make Squad for Tenth Time in Brilliant Careers.

By CASWELL ADAMS.

NEW YORK, June 30.—(INS)—Mel Ott and Billy Herman, both of whom have played in nine of the 10 all-star baseball games so far, will be on the National League team to shoot the works against the American League in Philadelphia's Shibe Park, July 13. This was the big gist of the announcement made here tonight by Ford Frick, top kick of the National League. The American League star-studded roster will be announced later.

Of the 25 players chosen by the eight managers, Ott and Herman stood out in point of service. In fact, of the 25, who will be managed by Billy Southworth, head man of the Cardinals, 10 have never played in an all-star game. And curiously enough, a fellow named Babe Dahlgren, top-hitter of the league, is one of them.

The Babe has been kicked around so much that no one ever gave him a vote before. This time he and Frank McCormick, Cincinnati's belter, who has played in five all-star games, are the first basemen. Dixie Walker, top man in the war bond league, and the Cardinals' Harry Walker, are other newcomers.

Eight Cardinals made the team, with the Dodgers and Cincinnati each contributing four. The Cubs placed three, the Giants and Pirates two each, and Boston and Philadelphia one apiece. The complete roster follows:

Catchers—Walker Cooper, Cardinals; Mickey Owen, Dodgers; Ernie Lombardi, Giants.

Football Out At Kentucky For Duration

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 30.—(AP)—Basketball moved up to the top of the sports program at the University of Kentucky today after school officials voted to drop football for the 1943-44 term.

Kentucky joined four other Southeastern Conference schools—Vanderbilt, Florida, Mississippi and Mississippi State—in banning football because of the war's inroads on manpower at a meeting of the university's athletic advisory council yesterday.

Announcing that the sport would be dropped Athletic Director Bernie Shively said the action was prompted by "an anticipated drop in male student enrollments this fall," and "we feel it will be impossible to get enough 17-year-old to field a team."

Head Football Coach Ab Kirwan and other members of his football coaching staff will remain at the university to assist in the athletic program to be developed for the hundreds of Army men now in training on the campus.

While the Navy has granted permission for certain classes of men now in training on school campuses to play football the Army has refused to permit its trainees to indulge in the sport.

Games called off by Kentucky's decision include:

Georgia at Atlanta, September 25; Georgia Tech here October 9; Auburn here October 23; Alabama at Tuscaloosa October 30; Xavier here November 6, and West Virginia at Roanoke November 13.

Final Lookout Game Washed Out; Pebs Next

Popular First Baseman Refuses Title of Acting Manager.

By JACK TROY,
Constitution Sports Editor.

Popular Harry Hughes will captain the Crackers as they open a new series with Little Rock's Travelers tonight at Ponce de Leon park.

Awarded the job of piloting the team temporarily, Hughes preferred to accept a title of field captain rather than acting manager.

Hughes, a steady first baseman, piloted the Bluefield (W. Va.) club of the Mountain State League last season. Previously he managed in Miami Beach.

Arrangement of the Southern League schedule brings Little Rock here for the second time in the first half. Buck Fawsett's defending champions won't appear here in the second half of the race.

Rain washed out the last two games of the Chattanooga series and Manager Sparky Olson was moaning as the team departed for home. "That means a couple more double-headers when we hit here the next time," Olson said.

HARRY HUGHES
(Field Captain)

The fans are due for a flock of bargain offerings, starting this week-end. There'll be a Fourth of July double-header with Little Rock.

Then Memphis and sensational Pete Gray move in for three successive bargain bills. There'll be double-headers, in addition to Sunday's with Little Rock, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. There will be seven games in the Memphis series, giving the fans ample chance to see the one-armed star, Gray, in action.

The Crackers open their final Atlanta series with Little Rock at 8:15 tonight. Single games are slated Friday and Saturday nights and will be followed by a Sabbath Independence Day double-header.

In view of the fact that the pitching staff has had two days' rest, it is likely that Charley Cozart will face the Travelers.

President Earl Mann is working steadily on a couple of deals and hopes to have something to announce today. Before the start of the second half he expects to name a new manager.

Variety Card To Wow 'Em Friday Night

A fan looking over the lineup for this week's wrestling program at the City Auditorium might well exclaim: "All this and boxing, too!"

Here's the wrestling bill in order of events:

Semi-windup—Dorve Roche and John Garnovich.

Feature match—Karl Davis and George Zaharias.

This sort of mat program offers outstanding entertainment. It's well-balanced.

And as an added attraction, Promoter Sammy Friedman is offering a "flop match" consisting of two blind-folded boxers and a third participant outside the ring with a glove on a long pole.

This third man will prod the others into blind action.

The participants in the unique boxing attraction have not been announced. They'll be two wild swingers.

Carleton Golf Star Winner In College Play

CHICAGO, June 30.—(AP)—Wallace Ulrich, of Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., won the National Collegiate Athletic Association golf championship today, defeating Bill Roden, of Texas, 4 and 2, in the final of the three-day tournament at Olympia Fields.

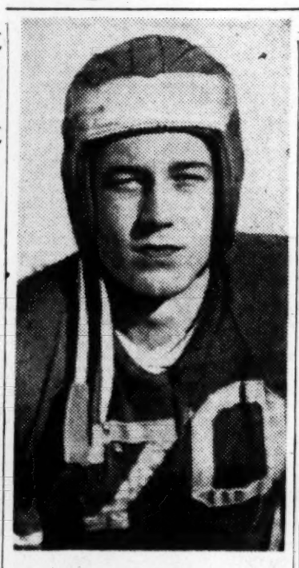

After dropping three of the first four holes, Ulrich settled down to the fine, steady game which had typified his earlier rounds and did not allow Roden to win another hole.

Two down going onto the fifth tee, Ulrich halved the next two, won the seventh and eighth to square the match, and took the ninth for a one up advantage at the turn.

He made this two up on the tenth as Roden twice drove into the trees, halved the 11th and 12th and won the 13th. They divided honors on the next two, and Ulrich put over the clincher on the 16th despite a bogey five, as Roden's game fell to pieces.

LYONS LOSES.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 30. (AP)—Jackie Lyons, young Oklahoma City middleweight, lost a decision in a 10-round fight last night with Babe Austin, 160, a Texas veteran.

Kirby Defeats ElizabethHicks OnTechnicality

National Champ Fails on Short Putt, Then Knocks Ball Away.

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN.

CHICAGO, June 30.—(AP)—Elizabeth Hicks, who won the "duration" national amateur championship in 1941, beat herself today in the women's Western Open golf tournament on the 19th hole of her quarter-final match with Dorothy Kirby.

The petite pro of Long Beach, Cal., blew a five-foot putt for a win, then, in a moment of irritation, knocked her ball off the green.

Going to the 20th tee, she remarked to Mrs. Charles Dennehy, official referee of the match, that "I don't believe my six-inch putt was conceded by Miss Kirby. Guess I lost the hole."

Miss Kirby, Atlanta, Ga., star who had dropped a 12-foot putt for a birdie on the 18th to square the match, said she didn't remember if she conceded the putt or not.

"I don't want to win by a technicality and I'll give her the putt now," insisted Miss Kirby.

Referee Dennehy had no alternative but to award the decisive hole to Miss Kirby under rules of match play which make it imperative for each putt to be holed out, unless definitely conceded on the green.

Advancing with Miss Kirby to tomorrow's 18-hole semi-final round were Patty Berg, winner of the national title in 1938 and the Western Open in 1940, and two brilliant newcomers from the east, Catherine Fox, of Glen Ridge, N. J., and Dorothy Germain, of Philadelphia.

Using her putter as a cane as well as a potent golf weapon, Patty was even par through 14 holes to beat Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., 5 and 4, in the morning session and was only one over regulation figures through 12 holes in the afternoon when she eliminated another Michigan star, Detroit's Marjorie Row, 4 and 3.

Miss Fox, Patty's 18-year-old opponent tomorrow, ousted Sportswriter Margaret Russell, of Detroit, 7 and 6, then beat Mrs. O. H. Romadka, of Rochester, Minn., 3 and 1, by winning six of the last seven holes. The english-born youngster was one over par in her 12-hole morning match but was eight over in the afternoon.

Miss Germain, 19, in defeating Phyllis Otto, of Omaha, Neb., 1942 runner-up in the Open, 4 and 3, and Kay Byrne, of Rye, N. Y., 3 and 2, was one under par in her morning match and only one over in the afternoon—posting a total of five birdies.

Miss Kirby romped through young Betty Jane Haemerle, of St. Louis, 7 and 6, before drawing Miss Hicks, a 5-foot-1-inch tournament veteran. Carding a fine 39 on the front nine to Miss Kirby's 41, Miss Hicks held a 2-up lead. The southern lassie finally squared the match on the 13th, but the lead changed hands three times until she again drew even with her 12-foot putt on No. 18 for a medal 38, one under par, on the back nine. Miss Hicks had a 40.

Miss Hicks boomed a 250-yard drive on the extra hole, planted her second on the edge of the green and chipped her third five feet from the cup and failed to get down. Miss Kirby was seven feet away in four shots, ramming in the putt for a par 5.

Joe Louis Seeks To Become M. P.

FORT CUSTER, Mich., June 30. (AP)—Because he feels his ability as a boxer would be more useful as an instructor in the military police, Sergeant Joe Louis said today he had requested a transfer to the M. P. unit here from the Fort Riley, Kan., cavalry unit.

Louis made his statement as he boarded a train to return to Chicago after a visit here. He said he planned to visit Detroit Friday and to be in Pittsburgh Friday night.

Smokies Trade Catcher Finley To Phillies

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 30. (AP)—Outfielder Paul Busby, right-handed thrower and left-handed batter, was one of three players obtained from the Philadelphia Phillies in exchange for Knoxville Catcher Bob Finley, Smokie President Edgar Allen said today.

An unannounced sum of cash also was involved in the trade.

Boys' High Loses Haas and Griffith to Navy

Pair Ran One-Two in G. I. A. A. Scoring Race.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Uncle Sam plays no favorites in this day and time and what happened to college football squads is happening to the high school teams too if the case of Boys' High, long the foremost grid power of the south, is any criterion.

When Coach Shorty Doyal calls for drills this fall the two lads he had counted upon most will be missing from the fold. Billy Haas and Johnny Griffith will be wearing Navy blue by then, and Billy and Johnny were the number one and two high scorers in the G. I. A. A. last year with Bounding Bill pacing them all with 104 points tallied.

Johnny, also one of the fastest track men in the south was inducted at Fort McPherson this week and left yesterday for the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, where he will be stationed for a few months.

Along with Johnny went two others of the best athletes among the local preps. Dan Roberts, winner of the Robert Owen Chaffin memorial trophy as the outstanding Purple basketball player of the year last season, was one, and Johnny Dobbs, Tech High's brilliant cage player, was the other.

Haas comes up for induction at Fort Mac on July 5, and he hopes to join Johnny at Great Lakes after his induction. Like Clint Castleberry and Don Paschal, former Boys' High greats, Billy and Johnny are inseparable off the field as well as on.

Boys' High last year won the city grid championship for the fourth straight year and copped eight games and lost one in the G. I. A. A. chase only to be shaded for the title by Savannah High, with a won five, lost none record, after the Purples had taken the state crown for three years previously.

Haas, playing his second year for the Hurricane, sparked the team throughout the year, was a master at breaking away for touchdowns on a half-spinner to the weak side. He tallied nine of his touchdowns in a row on that same play to become the most feared running back in th state.

Griffith, who was a substitute guard the year before, was transformed into a right halfback because of his speed and scored most of his points on reverse play runs. He also was one of the most deadly tackling sidebacks in the vicinity.

Chub Jenkins, 250-pound tackle guard on Boys' High 1942 eleven, also comes up for induction at the Fort on July 5, but since he is so much overweight it is thought he may not be accepted.

At any rate, replacing two of the best, if not the two best, backs in Georgia will be a tough assignment for the Basso Profundo of Purpletown this fall.

THE UNBEATEN

Here is a quiz program on racing for Saturday—one of the big days at the track, a day where, through the mutuels and the bookies, there will be something like $10,000,000 put up for auction. Possibly more.

Here's the quiz problem to figure out—what five horses, running in class competition up to 15 races, have never been beaten?

Man o' War was beaten once. Count Fleet has been beaten more than once. Whirlaway, the greatest money winner of all time, well over $500,000 has been beaten at least 20 times.

Alsab knows a long string of defeats, and Alsab is one of the best. And there was Seabiscuit, who cracked Sun Beau's all-time money-winning record of $376,744.

Seabiscuit was beaten time after time. Seabiscuit and Whirlaway, the two top-money winners, were beaten on over 40 occasions.

Shut Out, Kentucky Derby winner and Devil Diver, his running mate have been beaten more than a few times.

But there are still five unbeaten horses in the records that go well back. Who are they?

The Winning List

We put this problem up to Clem McCarthy who has been looking on and observing horseflesh closely for many years. More than a few.

Here is Clem's list:

Norfolk—1864.
Asteroid—1864.
Tremont—1886.
El Reo Rey—1889.
Colin, 15 races—1907 and 1908.

Colin is the one, old-time, racecamp followers remember best.

He was the top until Man o' War came along, more than a decade later, to drop a race where he was carried all over the track.

Man o' War was the star two and three-year-old personality, if you can apply that word to a thoroughbred. And he could also run.

DETROIT, June 30.—(AP)—The twilight game today between the Detroit Tigers and the Boston Red Sox was called because of darkness, after 12 innings with the score deadlocked at 3-all. The Sox forged ahead, 3 to 2, in the ninth on Bobby Doerr's homer with a teammate aboard and a double by Eddie Lake, scoring Babe Barna, but the Tigers knotted the count in their half of the ninth on Pinky Higgins' four-bagger. A crowd of 13,789 saw the contest, played for national war relief.

Tennessee Loses Three More Men

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 30.—(AP)—Athletic talent at the University of Tennessee will dwindle to two varsity competitors tomorrow when three basketball and three football players leave for Marine Corps training at Duke University.

The basketball players are Bill Bailey, Bill Wright and Mason Propps, and losses to football prospects are George Balitsaris, Allen Chandler and Jim Myers.

Their departure will leave on the campus only two football players, Billy Bevis and Bob Dobelstein, both of whom have been rejected by the Army for physical reasons.

'Who Won the World Series?' Jap Prisoner Asks U.S. Soldier

WORCESTER, Mass., June 30.—(AP)—"Who won the World Series?"

That question, projected by a Japanese soldier standing at the business end of a gun in the hands of Private First Class John F. Mooney Jr., in the steaming jungles of Guadalcanal, almost stunned the American soldier, he said in relating his experiences with the United States forces.

During the final phases of the campaign, Mooney said his unit came upon about 20 half-starved Japs.

"We yelled to them not to move," Mooney related, "and we wouldn't hurt them. But some of them reached for hand grenades—and we had to shoot them.

"There was one who hadn't moved and who had a big grin. He said in English: 'Who won the World Series?'"

Mooney said the prisoner explained later that he had toured the United States with a Japanese baseball team that once played in Worcester. A number of years ago a team from Hosei University played Holy Cross and other American colleges.

Champs Split Even in Two Giant Games

'Bums' Are Now Only Five Percentage Points From Top.

BROOKLYN, June 30.—(AP)—Entertaining a throng of 26,893 fans who contributed $32,134 in paid admissions to war relief, the Brooklyn Dodgers crushed the Cincinnati Reds twice today, 5 to 0 and 11 to 5, to press within a few percentage points of first place in the National League. Curt Davis and Buck Newsom held the Reds to 11 hits in the two games.

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—The Giants pushed over a 10th-inning run today on Sid Gordon's single, a wild pitch and Maynard's fly, to beat the St Louis Cardinals, 4 to 3, in the first game of a War Relief Fund doubleheader before an estimated 12,000 fans. The Cards had scored twice in the ninth to tie the score. The Cards won the second game, 5 to 0, on Howard Pollett's six-hitter.

ARMY GETS HORSE SHOW FUNDS—Colonel Clifford C. Early accepts a check in the amount of $5,021.18 from Fred Cannon, chairman of the Fulton-DeKalb horse show, while Colonel H. A. Favored Earl Bartlett Blasted Out of Tourney

Bob Dickson, Charleston, S. C., Star, Takes Gruelling Three-Set Decision in Southern.

By BERT PRATHER.

Unseeded and unheralded Bob Dickson, representing the U. S. Coast Guard, of Charleston, S. C., threw the men's singles division of the 58th annual Southern tennis tournament into a wide-open scramble yesterday afternoon by blasting topseeded Earl Bartlett, of New Orleans and Tulane University, out of the meet in a gruelling three-set match, 4-6, 6-0, 10-8.

Dickson, who is a yeoman third class with the Coast Guard, displayed one of the strongest backhands seen in a local tournament in many a moon. It was this weapon along with an amazing forehand chop that finally pulled him through over the clever Bartlett. The chop was particularly effective since the match was played on an extra heavy court. Dickson would send his sizzling chops across to Bartlett's backhand and many times the ball bounced less than two feet off the turf, so terrific was the spin.

Earl went out strong in the first set and managed to get through with the loss of only four games. In the second set, however, he got behind and then apparently coasted in, saving his energy for the third skirmish. This seemed like good strategy at first. The Tulane ace pulled out into a 5-2 lead, but the plugging Dickson began to lay them down the line and to the surprise of the crowd, knotted the count at five games all. Bartlett had match point at 5-4, but could not cash in on the opportunity. Bartlett then led 6-5, 7-6, before Bob took over. The score was tied at 7-all and 8-all before the Charleston Coast Guardsman managed to hold his own serve and break Bartlett's serve for the upset.

Jack Tuero, Bartlett's doubles partner and the second-ranked performer, managed to keep the Pelican State in the running with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Grant Shaffer, of St. Petersburg. The win placed Tuero, who is the present Southern Junior champion, in the quarter-finals where he meets Lieutenant Walter Pettit, of the Navy, at 4 p. m. today. This should be one of the best matches on today's program.

Another seeded player was ousted on yesterday's weather curtailed program when 16-year-old Wade Herren, of Birmingham, bumped sixth ranked Hank Crawford, 6-4, 6-2. Herren's triumph was not so surprising though, since he is a former national boys' champion and is no stranger at major tournament play. The only other men's match to get under way yesterday resulted in Cortez Suttles taking a 6-1 victory over Donald Floyd in the first set before Floyd finally collected his game to lead 5-3 as the elements halted festivities.

Only one match was completed in the women's singles. Florence Camp, second seeded, won out over Roberta Moore, of Dahlonega, Ga., 2-6, 6-2, 6-2, in a very interesting tussle.

Today's program should be one of the best of the tournament if the weather holds off. In addition to the Tuero-Pettit match, the Jack Teagle-Johnny Dennis scrap at 5 should be a honey. Thirteen matches in all are booked for today.

Convalescents At McPherson Get Fine Break

By PAUL JONES.

Convalescing soldiers at Fort McPherson yesterday were assured the added comforts of a place where they can have visitors when Fred L. Cannon, chairman of the Fulton-DeKalb Horse Show Committee, presented Colonel Clifford Early with a check in the amount of $5,021.18, the net proceeds from the recent horse show.

In accepting the check at the luncheon meeting at the Athletic Club, Colonel Early told of how this annex to the now enlarged hospital at the fort would aid in building up morale of the ill soldiers, since they now could have visitors, which they would meet in the new building provided for in these funds. In the past, few, if any, visitors were allowed in the hospital at this camp. Colonel H. A. Newell who now is in charge of the new hospital at this post also expressed his gratitude as well as the thanks of the enlisted men at the camp for the charitable gesture.

Cannon went over the budget item for item and explained that the estimated budget of $25,000 was exceeded by only $1,598.88 He paid tribute to the various committeemen who aided in making this one of the biggest horse shows ever held in this territory.

At the conclusion of the meeting, members of the committee presented Cannon with a silver cup, a token of their gratitude for his fine work in presenting the Fulton-DeKalb show.

Each and every member of the committee expressed the hope that plans for the 1944 horse show, which will be bigger and better than the 1943 show would go ahead uninterrupted.

Garms Defeats Rucker in Race

He was clocked in 6.2 seconds for a distance announced as 60 yards, but some doubt was expressed by track experts as to the accuracy of the course, for 6.2 seconds is only one-tenth of a second slower than the world indoor record and Garms ran in full baseball dress.

Garms beat the Giants' Johnny Rucker by a yard. He was timed by two A. A. U. clockers, Thomas Lennon and James Healey. Later, Starter Jack Lavelle estimated the distance at nearer 55 than 60 yards.

Hicks' Sportsmanship Praised by Dot Kirby

By DOROTHY KIRBY.

GLEN OAKS COUNTRY CLUB, June 30.—At this point I am having a hard time getting myself together to write this story. I won my match from Elizabeth Hicks on what you might call a technicality on the 19th hole. We really struggled all the way.

To give you an idea of how things went, I will start from the beginning at an early hour this morning. I won my first match by 7 and 6 from Betty Jane Haemlere. I was scoring much better today and my putts were dropping for me. When I found I was to meet Hicks this afternoon I was afraid I had shot all my golf out. I got off to a bad start by losing the first two holes.

We halved the short third, fourth and fifth. I managed to win the short sixth with a par three to be one down. We halved the seventh, eighth and I lost the ninth to a par to be two down at the turn.

I took the 10th and we squared the short 11th and also the 12th when Hicks chipped out of the trap to get a four. I won the 13th to square the match. The 14th was halved and I lost the 15th to a par to go one down again. It was getting to the point where the holes were running out but I scrambled in a par to the win the 16th and square things again. However, I lost the long 17th to a par and was one down going to the 18th. It was here that I nearly passed out of the picture. I hole a 12-footer for a birdie four to square the match again.

This carried us to the 19th. It was here that the technicality occurred. I holed another 12-footer for a par five, and Hicks missed a short putt for a win, and so we started to the 20th. As we were walking to the tee the referee stopped me and said that Elizabeth said that she knocked her ball away on the 19th after missing her putt and therefore it cost her the hole. I was intent on getting to the 20th tee and didn't see anything that happened. After it was all talked over it was decided that Hicks lost the hole. Naturally I didn't want to win the match on something like this, but the referee said that I didn't have any say so in it since it was up to her. I think it was certainly fine sportsmanship in Elizabeth to call this on herself, and that sure shows up on a golf course. I take my hat off to Elizabeth and also give her my thanks. You certainly can't ever tell what will happen in a game of golf.

Vols Annex First Half Title as Travelers Split

Four-Run Outburst in Ninth Gives Gilbertmen First Game, 4-3.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 30.—(AP)—Nashville's Vols clinched the first-half championship of the Southern Association by setting down Knoxville with a double defeat today, 4-3, 6-3, while second-place Little Rock was dividing a pair with Birmingham.

To win the first one, Larry Gilbert's crew had to come from behind, scoring all their runs in the ninth to spoil a nicely pitched game by Joe Powers. Melvin Hicks' sixth home run of the season started the spurt, in which Steve Collins' boot contributed to two unearned Nashville runs.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 30. (AP)—The Little Rock Travelers and Birmingham's Barons split a double-header here tonight, thus cinching the first-half pennant for the Nashville Vols.

The Travelers won the seven-inning opening game, 2 to 1, behind three-hit pitching by Waymon Kersieck, but dropped the nightcap, 10 to 2.

The split left second-place Little Rock five and one-half games behind Nashville with both clubs scheduled to play five more games each before the end of the first-half of the split season Sunday

The Vols will play host to the All-Star game July 9, meeting a squad of 17 players selected in the annual poll of sports writers in the various league cities. The All-Star lineup will be announced Friday by the Southern Association of Baseball Writers.

The Baron's Andy Lapihuska engaged in a mound duel with Kerksieck in the opening game, but the visitors lumped singles by Fred Hancock, Buck Fausett and Robert McGhee with an error and a hit runner to tally two runs in the fifth.

Birmingham batsmen cut loose on two Traveler hurlers to take the second. Jim Walsh, the league's leading home run hitter, got his 12th in the eighth with one on.

PEBBLES 2-2, BARONS 1-10.

Ladies, Speedway Play Thursday

The Lorelei Ladies and Speedway were declared too strong for the Girls War Workers League and are now playing an exhibition game each week.

Virginia Kerr, who manages and coaches the Speedway girls, was handicapped last week by the absence of her fireball pitcher, and since it seems certain that she will still be short handed this week, the Lorelei Ladies have agreed to loan her a pitcher, which may mean the defeat of the Loreleis.

Sara Lewis, the Lorelei ace, will be on the mound for Speedway and she has stated that she expects to strike out no less than 12 of her buddies Sara is the kind of athlete who plays for keeps and is always sure to turn in a magnificent performance. Dorothy Wright has an envious record and it was behind her pitching that the Lorelei Ladies first became recognized as an outstanding team. She will be toeing the rubber for the Loreleis and is expected to match any performance which Sara may turn in for Speedway. This week's game will be played Thursday at 8:30 p. m at Grady Field

Confident Note Closes Month

NEW YORK, June 30.—(AP)—The stock market today closed the month on a confident note with prices at the best average levels since the autumn of 1939.

After spiritless action on the part of the steels and marked hesitancy in other key groups in the early proceedings the list swung into a broad advance in the final hour for general gains ranging from fractions to around 2 points.

Showing consistent climbing power, the air transport shares, utilities, merchandising stocks, chemicals and a wide list of specialties had an especially good day.

Brokers credited the improved brand of buying to inflationary ideas generated by a sharp upturn in commodities, the optimistic speeches of Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden in London, and the disclosure that American forces had landed on Rendova island in the central Solomons.

The bond market moved into higher ground all along the line today in the most active session in more than a month. A wide variety of low to medium-priced rails advanced fractions to more than a point and persistent investment demand kept the higher-priced utilities and industrials pointing upward.

Improved in the curb were Aluminum of America, Electric Bond & Share, International Petroleum and Niagara Hudson Power. Brazilian Traction, and Aluminium, Ltd., were lower. Transactions here were 251,755 shares against 253,490 the day before.

CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, June 30.—(AP)—Hog prices held steady today on most classes but the top was off five cents to $13.75 while fed steers were steady to strong and sheep were 25 to 35 cents lower.

The live hog supply was 14,000, or 4,000 below advance estimates, but big packers had 7,000 additional on direct consignment and were inclined to refrain from bidding up prices. Shippers were active, however, and took 1,000. The bulk of the choice lighter weights sold from $13.50 to $13.65. Sows were mostly $12.60-$12.85.

Fed steers topped at $17.10 with best heifers up to $16.75. The market was more active than yesterday and eastern order buyers took a liberal supply. It was largely a $14.50 to $16.50 market. Salable head totaled 8,000 and calves 700. A few choice vealers brought up to $15.50.

There were only 1,000 salable sheep in the run but packers received 3,000 more directs. The market on fed clipped lambs and springers was as much as 50 cents lower than Monday. One load of choice clipped western lambs brought above $14.00. The top on springers was $15.50. Sheep were weak and mostly $7.75 and lower.

STANDARD PAYS DIVIDEND.

The directors of the Standard Federal Savings and Loan Association at the regular June meeting credited or set aside, effective June 30, approximately $30,275.72 as semiannual dividends to shareholders for the first six months of 1943, at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, J. L. R. Boyd, secretary and attorney, announced this week. According to Mr. Boyd, the association's available and unused cash credit or discount privileges with the Federal Home Loan Bank total $850,000. Mr. Boyd stated further that total outstanding mortgage loans totaling more than $1,902,140 were secured by more than $4,000,000 of conservatively appraised real estate consisting of homes.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle.

Nation on Eve Of Great Campaign, Ickes Tells Miners

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes tonight told the nation's coal miners—particularly that group which has not yet returned to work—that America stands "on the eve of the greatest military campaign of history" and that the complaints of no man or group of men can be placed above our military goal."

He urged a full return to the pits, telling the miners theirs was only one of numerous group grievances presented in Washington—"many of them justified"—and that "each of these special groups tends to overlook the major issue—the winning of the war—to the immediate interest of the particular group."

"It may be no comfort to the miners to know that others, too, are serving their country under economic disabilities, but this is the fact," the custodian of the government-seized mines said. "All of us must continue to serve until the need passes, disability or no disability economically."

In every reference Ickes made to failure of the miners and mine owners to reach a settlement, he carefully avoided laying greater responsibility on either side.

"There is no intention on my part," he said, "to expect a greater contribution from the miners than from any other group.

"The man who tonight or tomorrow or next day does not carry his full share in this country's fight either does not understand the immediate crisis that we face, or he deliberately sabotages in that fight in the hope that our enemies may win," the government coal boss declared.

Ickes promised fair treatment—but no favors—either to the miners or the owners of the pits seized by the government to avert further work stoppages.

"I can assure the men who mine coal, and all others, that their government does not sell the citizens of this country down the river at any time," he said, but he also declared that:

"I favor the mining of coal whether there is or is not a contract between the coal-mine owners and the miners . . . whether miners do or do not get a raise in wages . . . whether miners are paid for portal-to-portal time."

And, speaking on what he called "the eve of the greatest military campaign of history," he insisted:

"Every muscle, every sinew, every ounce of blood and guts that we have must be pledged to a single purpose—the complaints of no man or group of men can be placed above our military goal."

During the day conditions brightened slightly in the strike-hit coal fields with the return of 9,000 miners to work, but 130,000 of the nation's 521,000 still were ignoring the June 21 order of the United Mine Workers' policy committee to go back to the pits. About 100,000 of those idle are in Pennsylvania.

'Not Striking—Just Quit Mining'

BIRMINGHAM, June 30.—(AP)—A UMWA member who would not be quoted by name today explained why he was not at work: "I am not striking. I have just quit being a coal miner."

"Our contract calling for $5.25 per day was based on prices of April 1, 1941," he said. "We will go back to work if the prices are made the same now as then. When I pay $1.28 for a sack of flour which cost me 69 cents two years ago, I know we are not getting a square deal."

PRELUDE TO INVASION—This big American-built but British-operated General Sherman tank is shown being backed into a landing craft during recent invasion maneuvers by the Allies on the North African coast. Congress Again Hits FDR, Orders End of Meat-Butter Slash

WASHINGTON, June 30.—(AP)—Congress, handing the Roosevelt administration another legislative setback, today forbade use of subsidies to push down retail food prices and ordered the meat-butter price "rollback" ended by August 1.

The action was taken in the face of repeated declarations from high government officials, from President Roosevelt down, that without subsidies it would be extremely difficult if not impossible to hold the line against inflation.

Consequently, some legislators anticipated that the President may veto the ban which was incorporated in legislation extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation for two more years from midnight tonight and adding $750,000,000 to its present $2,650,000,000 lending powers.

However, the measure was approved in both senate and house by far more than the two-thirds majority which would be necessary to override a veto. The house vote was 160 to 32, and the senate vote, 62 to 13.

Other legislators suggested that Mr. Roosevelt might be reluctant to disapprove the measure since this would halt the agency's lending programs to farmers and, for the time being at least, put it out of business.

As finally sent to the White House, the prohibition against use of subsidies to lower food prices represented a compromise between differing bills approved previously by the house and the senate.

Less restrictive than the original house measure, it permits continued use of subsidies—up to $150,000,000—to meet increased transportation costs due to the war (now being paid on movement of oil to the east coast and on coffee imports), and to promote production of critical metals and war essential foods. It also allows incentive payments on canning and specialty crops, price support for domestic vegetable oils and fats, and payments for sale of wheat for feeding purposes.

However, no subsidies could be paid simply to reduce prices.

Before final passage, a provision prohibiting government agencies from deducting farm benefit payments in calculating agricultural price ceilings was stricken out.

ROYAL CROWN CAMPAIGN

——Starting today, over 500 newspapers from coasft to coast will carry a big newspaper campaign on Royal Crown Cola. The advertisements will appear every week in The Atlanta Constitution right through until the end of September. This program was announced today by J. W. Roach, president of the Atlanta Royal Crown Bottling Co.

Among the box office favorites who headline this series are: Rita Hayworth, Loretta Young, Dorothy Lamour, eJannette MacDonald and Veronica Lake.

In addition to this extensive newspaper campaign the story of Royal Crown Cola will be told through radio announcements, outdoor posters and national magazines.

Mr. Roach stated that the decision to make newspapers the spearhead of Royal Crown Cola's campaign was based on the following factors: Consumer surveys show that today more people are reading newspapers. Newspapers are being read more thoroughly by both men and women. More people are turning to newspapers as the complete source of information on war news, wartime regulations and news of food products.

CIGARETS FOR SOLDIERS

——Charlie Vocalis, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Atlanta Post No. 390, announces that this organization is sponsoring the giving of free cigarets to be distributed to military personnel overseas. More than 100 banks have been placed in various retail outlets as well as prominent gathering places to collect money to defray the expense of this undertaking. All proceeds collected will be used for the purchase of cigarets at a cost of 5 cents per package and will be delivered wherever American troops are stationed throughout the world. This is a needy cause and is worthy of everyone's contribution.
